Night Parley Seeks to End Milk Strike

Senate GOP Sets Aug. 5 As Goal for Session End

Will Cooperate If Democrats Scale Down Program to Five Major Points

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate GOP Policy Committee yesterday offered to help adjourn Congress by August 5 if Democratic leaders "scale down" their program and aaccept two Republican "musts."

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), chairman of the Republican steering group, said Republicans will "cooperate" to adjourn Congress early if the program is held down to these five major points:

1. Extension of the draft law (following passage of the pending Social Security expansion bill).
2. Another attempt to pass a fair employment practices bill.
3. Continuation of the military assistance program.
4. Passage of the omnibus appropriation bill.
5. Passage of a tax bill reducing wartime exeise levies.

Two Conditions Stated

The fifth point, still a question mark on the Democratic leadership's list, was made one of two Republican conditions to collaboration in the adjournment drive.

The second GOP condition was an opportunity for Republicans to try to reinstate authority for the Tariff Commission to recommend "peril points," below which tariffs could not be slashed without injury to American industry.

Taft called this a "reasonable program" and said Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) will try to work out an agreement to this effect with Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.). He said a longer legislative schedule submitted by Lucas was boiled down to the five points by Wherry.

Lucas Aims at July 31

Lucas has been striving for a July 31 adjournment and a recent Senate Democratic Party conference agreed to cooperate in the speed-up.

Allowing for appropriation bill delays, Wherry said he was "shooting" for adjournment by August 5. Taft named the same tentative adjournment date and said he is "sanguine" an agreement can be reached on it.

Keep the Boys from Talking

Asked how Republicans would cooperate, Taft grinned.

"Our part of the deal would be to keep the boys from talking," he said.

Taft and Wherry received reporters following a Republican Policy Committee "review" of the longer legislative list submitted by Lucas.

Wherry said Congress would be here until November if it tried to approve all of the measures on the Democratic leadership's tentative list.

Asked about such items as extension of the synthetic rubber

Hayes, England, June 14 (AP).—Bessie turned sadly away from her 10 newborn pigs, her third litter, and ran into a pond and drowned. "She must have made up her mind to commit suicide," said her owner, Robert Dulieu. "The old girl seemed fed up with life."

Senate Defeat of Hutchinson, Byrd Foe, Seen After Hearing

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Informed Capitol Hill sources yesterday predicted that the Senate Commerce Committee would report unfavorably on President Truman's nomination of Martin A. Hutchinson, Virginia foe of Senators Harry F. Byrd and A. Willis Robertson, to the Federal Trade Commission.

In addition these sources also forecast that the Senate would reject the nomination by a probable margin of 15 votes, made up of a Republican and Southern Democratic coalition. Action on the nomination may be taken today at an executive session of the committee, provided a quorum is present.

Chairman Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) of the Senate Republican Policy Committee has said he believes many Republicans will oppose Hutchinson on the ground that he is not qualfied by experience for the Trade Commission appointment.

Some members of the Commerce group have commented that Hutchinson, a likeable enough candidate, is simply caught in the middle of a Truman-Byrd battle in a situation where Byrd has the votes.

Rejection of the nomination would be in accordance with normal Senate procedure where objections from Senators from the State of a nominee generally prevail in halting its acceptance.

GOP Asks Amerasia Probers To Hear Clark and Hoover

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) yesterday renewed Republican appeals that a special Senate investigating subcommittee, of which he is a member, take testimony on the Amerasia magazine case from Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark and FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover.

They were involved in the investigation and prosecution of the 1945 case, in which several hundred Government documents of various secrecy classifications were discovered in the offices of a now defunct magazine. Its editor, Philip Jaffe, has been disclosed as having had close Communist connections, and has been accused of being a "Soviet agent".

Meantime, the Senate Republican Policy Committee conducted a long discussion of the Amerasia case yesterday but failed for the time being, to make a resolution demanding a full Senate investigation a matter of official GOP policy.

The resolution was offered earlier this week by 21 Republican Senators. It is opposed by the Democratic Senate leadership.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio), chairman of the GOP policy unit, told reporters after the meeting yesterday that although considerable discussion was given to the subject, the resolution was not formally made a part of Republican policy. He intimated, however, that the door was not closed to such an action at some future date.

There seemed little likelihood that Hickenlooper's request would be followed. The Democratic-controlled Senate Investigating Committee has indicated it is content that its inquiry into the Amerasia case has produced full information and answers to all salient questions.

Furthermore, many Democrats

D. C. Teen-age Pair Held as Counterfeiters

Albany, N. Y., June 14 (AP).—A traveling, teen-aged couple accused of making and passing phony $10 bills was jailed here tonight.

George Van Fleet, United States Secret Service agent stationed at Utica, said the pair had admitted passing an estimated $600 counterfeits across the country, from Boston, Mass., to St. Joseph, Mo.

Van Fleet identified them as William H. Zoerndt, 18, and his wife Helen, 17, a mother-to-be.

The couple gave no home address. Van Fleet said they last lived in a furnished room in Washington, D. C., where they started "making" the money.

He said they left there April 28 and made counterfeits by a photographic process while traveling.

Van Fleet said he believed the two had worked alone and had no connection with any counterfeiting ring.

They hit Baltimore, Philadelphia, Providence, Boston, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Joseph and Albany, Troy, Utica and Syracuse, N. Y., he said.

The young wife was arrested yesterday in an Amsterdam bakery, where the woman in charge questioned a bill and detained her. The husband gave himself up when he heard of his wife's arrest.

The two waived examination at arraignment in Schenectady. They were committed to Albany County jail pending grand jury action. Zoerndt's bail was set at $10,000 and his wife's at $2500.

The couple eloped from their homes in Springfield, Mass., last October and were married in Spartanburg, S. C.,

Peurifoy Likely To Be Appointed Envoy to Greece

John E. Peurifoy, deputy undersecretary who heads the State Department's security program, probably will be appointed United States Ambassador to Greece soon, informed sources said yesterday.

They said Peurifoy is reported to have been asking for an overseas assignment and that he very likely will succeed Ambassador Henry F. Grady in Greece. Grady is ambassador-designate to Iran.

House Group Keeps D. C. Rent Curbs

Votes 7-Month Extension, Then Option on Further Controls to July, '51

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A bill to continue District rent control through January 31, 1951, was approved by an 11-6 vote of the House District Committee yesterday.

Committee Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) said he would seek House action on the measure next week.

Members said the bill would give Congress, as the local governing body of the District, the choice in January of killing rent control here or continuing it through June 30, 1951.

The District government had asked that the law be continued from its present expiration date, June 30, for another full year, through June 30, 1951.

The idea of a 7-month extension was patterned on the House formula adopted Tuesday under which the national rent-control law would be continued 7 months, and communities be empowered to control rents an additional 5 months.

By deciding that local option for Washington should be left to Congress, the District Committee vetoed a proposal to let the Commissioners decide on the extra period of rent control.

Chairman McMillan announced that the committee approved two other District government recommendations. One would decontrol furnished nonhousekeeping rooms after June 30 this year. The other provides for landlords in rent-increase cases to present the best available evidence, rather than original records, as justification to show increased costs.

Senate Rejects House 7-Month Extension

The Senate yesterday refused to accept a House amendment to the "local option" rent control extension measure and sent the bill to conference.

Key point at issue is a House clause which would extend controls to January 31, thus in effect leaving it in the lap of the next Congress to make a new decision on controls.

The Senate had voted to extend the law to December 31, leaving it up to local communities to decide whether there should be another six-month extension. The House made it a seven-month mandatory extension, with a five-month local option.

Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), who filibustered against the bill for 12 hours last week, indicated he might resume his filibuster if the Senate version was not accepted.

Minnesota's Edward J. Thye (R., Minn.) explained to the Senate why Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.) had sponsored the amendment putting mandatory Federal controls over to January 31, instead of December 31.

He said that Governor Youngd..hl of Minnesota had called attention of the Minnesota delegation to the fact that the State Legislatures in Minnesota and 11 other States do not normally meet until January. These 12 States will be put to great expense, Thye explained, if they have to call a special session of the Legislatures to pass on rent control.

Dropping of Aliens In U. S. Embassies Urged to Senate

A Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee recommended last night that all aliens now employed abroad in United States Embassies, consulates and legations be replaced as rapidly as possible by Americans. They number about 13,000, most of them in Germany and Austria.

"Aliens are the most likely means of foreign penetration and the effort to penetrate our security abroad is constantly growing," the subcommittee said.

The report was signed by the two members of the subcommittee, Senators Green (D., R. I.) and Lodge (R., Mass.). Green and Lodge traveled to Europe last month to look into the State Department's security set-up abroad.

D. C. Declares War Against Illegal Milk

Seckinger Orders Inspectors to Fight Flow; Legal Sales Top 20,000 Quarts

By Thomas Winship and Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporters

District Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger last night announced his inspectors have launched an intensive crackdown against importation of illegal milk for sale here during the strike.

This warning came as the new emergency milk supply plan, in its first day, allowed across-the-counter sale of about 20,000 quarts at the area's nine strike bound dairies.

At 5 p. m. yesterday, six Metropolitan Police motorcycle men had picked up 410 certificates from local doctors' offices for milk deliveries to homes of persons unable to make their own purchases.

Officials said the emergency plan apparently was working out satisfactorily, though doctors reported they were swamped with requests for certificates to allow milk for the sick and for infants.

Seckinger said the basic milk act of 1925 forbids sale of milk here except that which comes from dairies licensed by the District Health Department. With nine major dairies here closed, that means only Highland Farms and two smaller dairies in nearby Maryland can distribute milk in the District, he added.

The only way milk could be imported here for immediate sale from unlicensed dairies would be by act of Congress, Seckinger said.

A joint resolution that would authorize the District Commissioners to permit this was introduced in the House Tuesday by Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.). The House District Committee discussed it yesterday but took no action, McMillan said.

Licensing of new dairies under existing law probably would be impossible before the strike ends, Seckinger said: Before issuing a license the Health Department must inspect not only the dairy plant, but also all farms from which it draws its milk, he pointed out.

Seckinger said Health Department inspectors will check all stores in the city to prevent sale of illegal milk.

"We are concerned about importation of low-grade milk that might spread disease," the health officer said. "When they just bring it in like that we have no way of knowing where it came from."

Even with the emergency milk supply program, invoked Tuesday night, the estimated 20,000 quarts sold across the counter and the more than 410 home deliveries yesterday represented a mere trickle of the normal local milk availability.

The 20,000 figure came from individual checks with the nine dairies, with every dairy official warning that the figure is only a rough estimate.

Under the plan, the dairies are open from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m. daily on a cash-and-carry basis to all comers who have a certificate.

Home deliveries went through according to plan to persons whose physicians specified no member of the family was physically able to go to a dairy.

Writer Likens D. C. to Chicago As Center of Violent Crime

Washington is becoming the Chicago of hoodlum crime, Collier's magazine reported yesterday.

What the home of Al Capone was to the gangster era, "Washington bids fair to become in the new era . . . of the mugging and yoking, the street assault, the wanton murder, the rape and the psychopathic sex crime," the national weekly said.

It tells the Nation what Washingtonians already know: that more aggravated assaults were committed in Washington in 1948 and 1949 than in any other city in the Nation.

"Washington catches a great many criminals," author Howard Whitman reports, "but it still has a horrible crime record. It doesn't prevent crime."

'Put Cops Back on the Beat'

Congress can prevent crime in Washington, Whitman said, "by cleaning up the infectious sinks where crime is bred," and "by putting the cop back on the beat."

There are not enough police in Washington in the first place, the article said, and special time-consuming details make police force coverage even thinner. An example was cited of a 14-year-old run-away from the Receiving Home who rode a stolen horse, naked and bareback, for two miles through the city and was not seen by police.

Negroes are not primarily responsible for Washington's high crime rate, the article said.

"Yes, the most crime-ridden precinct in the city (the Second) is predominantly Negro. Negroes outnumber whites more than 2 to 1. But the Fourteenth Precinct has one of the best crime records in the city. And there, Negroes outnumber whites 3 to 1.

"Crime, as every sociologist knows, is a slum-connected characteristic," he said. "And Negroes are ghettoized in these slums."

Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett was described as "a good administrator, a hard-boiled, rough and tumble character," who "in his early days received 101 commendations for brilliant police work."

"But he was four times brought before trial boards on charges of brutality," the article continued. "Washington is a town where bygones are hard to forget. As one law enforcement official said, 'In view of Barrett's record, it is hard to convince any of the new men who are on their way up in the Police Department, that brutality doesn't pay off.'"

Washington "has an excellent detective force," Collier's reported, "top-drawer performance in solving crimes and catching the culprits. This is the lock-the-barn-after-the-horse-is-out approach."

Northern Virginia May Get New Congressional District

Northern Virginia's gigantic population boom—a 104 percent increase in the last 10 years—may have deep political implications in the next two years.

Observers see everything from the certainty of larger representations for the burgeoning area in the General Assembly to a redistricting of the Eighth Congressional District, a seat now held by Representative Howard W. Smith, dean of the Virginia delegation.

Alexandria, Arlington, Fairfax, Prince William and Loudoun Counties have 346,010 residents, by the 1950 census figures. The area thus tops the population minimum of 330,000 required for a Congressional District.

The question is whether the city and four counties, in a bloc, will be redistricted by the Virginia General Assembly.

It all depends on whether the General Assembly sees any reason for changing the District's boundaries.

If it does, there's a chance that Smith—now seeking his eleventh term in the House—will be defeated in the 1952 or 1954 elections. His August nomination and fall reelection are generally conceded.

Such organizations as the AFL's Labor League for Political Education foresee defeat for him should his district be changed.

The league said yesterday it is banking on redistricting to defeat him. The organization doubts that any reapportionment can be bene-

Can Handle Situation, It Contends

Alexandria Says 'No, Thanks' To Battle's Offer of Milk Aid

Alexandria officials yesterday rejected an offer of Gov. John S. Battle to send milk into the city from other sections.

After a conference, city officials decided the milk-strike situation, "while serious, is not now so acute as to require official action by the city at this time," Mayor Franklin P. Backus told reporters.

Battle's offer was telegraphed to City Manager W. Guy Ancell. It was prompted by a resolution of the Alexandria City Council Tuesday. The resolution declared the milk stoppage an official emergency and called on Governor Battle to investigate means of State intervention.

Mayor Backus pointed out yesterday that the request for State aid was made when "no one knew what the full impact of the strike would be." Appraisal of the circumstances yesterday, he said, indicated that State aid had not yet become necessary.

Battle's telegram, reporting that between 20,000 and 25,000 gallons of milk could be furnished daily to the northern Virginia area, said all "reasonable needs" in the State can be supplied.

"All necessary police protection will be furnished," said Battle.

"If . . . you, in conjunction with county authorities in Arlington and Fairfax, or acting separately, will set up local committees responsible for and charged with distribution of milk, this office will marshal all available sources of supply.

"This distressing condition originated in Washington, where Congress is now in session and spread into the Alexandria area where your city council may quickly be called to pass such emergency legislation as may be deemed advisable," the Governor's telegram added.

"Although this appears to be a matter for local initiative, I am anxious to be of all possible assistance in relieving any distress which may exist."

The reply of Alexandria officials, signed by Ancell, stated:

"Thank you for your offer of assistance to marshal all available sources of milk supply. Will keep you advised of the situation. We, too, are confident that all reasonable needs can be supplied through your help and assistance at such time as the city may avail itself of your kind offer."

Attending the special meeting were Backus, Ancell, City Attorney V. Floyd Williams, Police Chief Edgar Sims, M. H. Burchell president of Alexandria Dairy; City Councilmen Leroy S. Bendheim and R. Samuel Luckett, and representatives of the Board of Health.

One Issue Is Crux Of Milk Strike

There's but a single issue in the milk strike.

The union wants a shorter work week without loss of take-home pay. Management accepts the proposal in principle. The two sides cannot agree on how to do it.

The dairy employes under their old contract worked a 6-day, 48-hour week and drivers made their deliveries every other day. The dairies now operate 7 days each week.

Management has offered a 5-day work week, with time-and-a-half for overtime after 40 hours for plant employes, and after 44 hours for drivers, on condition that dairy operations be shut down Sundays.

The union rejected this proposal because of the Sunday shutdown proposal. The union contends the management offer would result in weekend deliveries of three-day stockpiles of milk, and a resulting loss of customers and commissions for the drivers.

Latest proposal by the union is for a 5½-day week with the 7-day plant operation. This offer provides for continuation of home deliveries every other day.

The dairies have not flatly rejected this offer. They hold, however, that unless some compromise can be worked out to reduce plant operation to 6 days a week, the cost of milk will shoot up prohibitively.

Stricken Motorist Dies in Scout Car On Way Home

John F. McMahon, 60, collapsed and died last night in a police scout car which was taking him to his home at 1424 Taylor st. nw., police reported.

McMahon complained of feeling ill while driving home about 9 p. m. He stopped his car and told a pedesttrian at Quebec pl. and Georgia ave. nw.

Scout car 101 was hailed, and Pvt. John E. Burroughs offered to drive McMahon home in the scout car while Pvt. Garrett Kirwin followed in McMahon's car.

McMahon died before reaching home, Burroughs reported.

Prospects Good for Doubling Real Wages by 1980, CED Says

Prospects for doubling workers' real wages in the next 30 years are very favorable, the Committee for Economic Development concludes in a report issued yesterday.

The CED, an organization of prominent and progressive-minded businessmen, said real wages—the value of wages in terms of what they can buy—have more than tripled in the last 50 years and that "the country has a good opportunity to raise real wages as rapidly in the future as in the past."

Success in doubling the value of the workers' pay checks in the next three decades, the CED report declared, depends primarily on increasing productivity—the output per man-hour of work—at the same rate that it has improved in the past. In the last 50 years productivity has increased on an average of about 2.5 percent annually.

The CED report, "How to Raise Real Wages," found that the factors that made for growing productivity throughout the first half of this century still persist—that with some exceptions the trend continues toward higher output per hour of work.

It warned, however, that productivity gains will not continue automatically, and that although prospects are good for steps in the right direction, a certain number of policies must be embraced, deliberately, by management, workers, Government and the community at large.

In particular, the report called

Peace Hopes Revived As Quibbling Is Terminated

Management, Union Agree To All-Out Effort To Hurry End of Crisis Here

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Prospects for early settlement of the five-day milk strike brightened last night when management and union called a halt to their bickering and resumed real peace negotiations.

Representatives of the nine shutdown dairies and of the AFL milk drivers and dairy employes union renewed their mediation sessions with two Federal conciliators at 7:15 p. m. at the Wardman Park Hotel.

At 2 a. m. today the parley was continuing after negotiators took a brief breather for an early morning snack.

Both sides vowed earlier that they would cease their running word-battle of the past several days and get down to the main business of settling the contract dispute which has created a milk drought in the Nation's Capital.

Original Issue Ignored

The original cantract dispute, over the union's demand for a shorter work week without loss of take-home pay, had been shunted aside for a verbal skirmish over responsibility for greater Washington's milk emergency.

The union insists it has struck only three dairies and has been locked out of six; management maintains the union struck all nine dairies and came up with the "lockout" charge only as an afterthought. The union has taken its "lockout" accusation to the National Labor Relations Board and has asked for a court order to force reopening of six dairies. The NLRB is investigating the charge.

Although technically in session with Federal Mediators Martin O'Connell and Henry Baker for the past two days, the management and union leaders engaged in a series of exchanges via telegram and letter—despite the fact they were separated only by a single room at the Wardman Park.

Both management and union officials privately expressed the belief that with the side issues out of the way, a setlement of the key dispute might be quickly reached.

Last union proposal, still to be answered by the dairies, is for a 5½-day work week, with the present six-day pay and seven-day plant operation. Last management proposal is for a five-day 40-hour week for plant employes; five-day 44-hour week for drivers; and a six-day plant operation. There are 1650 employes involved in the dispute.

Tuesday night, during the side-

Laborites Win Seven Votes on Keeping Gas Tax

London, (Thursday) June 15 (U.P.).—The Labor government, in a series of votes Wednesday night and early today, beat off an organized opposition attack on its finance bill and averted a political crisis—for the time being at least.

The government won seven votes against the Conservative and Liberal opposition in a debate that dragged on into the early morning hours.

The Labor margins ranged from a high of 14 votes to a low of 11.

Five successive Conservative motions to annul a 100 percent increase in the gasoline tax were defeated by votes of 302 to 288, 300 to 286, 295 to 281, 294 to 281 and 294 to 281. The government also forced closure of debate twice by votes of 302 to 289 and 292 to 281.

Labor, Conservative and Liberal parties had summoned their members urgently to Commons for the votes—the first round in a bitter fight over budget items

Truman Departs To See Quantico Marine Exercises

President Truman left yesterday by yacht for an overnight cruise to nearby Quantico, Va., where he will watch the Marine Corps exhibit its latest methods of amphibious assaults today.

The President traveled aboard the White House yacht Williamsburg along with members of his staff. He will disembark at Quantico at 8 a. m. today and motor to a wooded demonstration area on the banks of the Potomac River to watch the Marines attack a shore position.

One of the new stunts in warfare which the Marines will demonstrate will be the landing of an assault force from nine helicopters.

The President will return to the White House late this afternoon.

Lobby Unit to Hear Hart, Rumely Again

The embattled House Lobby Committee yesterday decided to recall Merwin K. Hart, president of the National Economic Council, and Edward A. Rumely, executive secretary of the Committee for Constitutional Government, for further questioning.

Apparently dropped, or held in abeyance, were threats to cite Rumely and Joseph P. Kamp, executive vice president of the Constitutional Educational League, for contempt for not producing records in answer to an earlier committee subpena.

By motion of the Democrats, Chairman Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.) was formally armed by committee vote with power to subpena witnesses and records.

The four to three vote, which split along party lines, was hailed by GOP critics as proof they were right when they claimed Buchanan lacked authority to subpena Rumely and Kamp. Buchanan said he insisted on his original position that he had the authority anyway by virtue of the congressional resolution.

The committee will start questioning Hart next Tuesday. His case may require several days.

Kamp, he said, is due to go to jail Friday on another contempt charge and the committee will decide later whether to take any further action against him or his organization.

The committee was reported also to have wrangled yesterday about Buchanan's demand for records of 166 corporations which were selected, according to Brown, "solely because they contributed to, or were expected to contribute to, right wing organizations."

Buchanan said 50 to 60 of the firms already have complied with his request and that more than 100 have indicated they would comply. Only two, he said, have indicated they might not comply and neither of these can be taken so far as a flat refusal.

He identified the two firms as Inland Steel Corp., and Southern California Edison Co.

Lustron Probe Is Demanded By Ohio Judge

Columbus, Ohio, June 14 (AP). United States District Judge Mell G. Underwood said today he would call a grand jury to investigate the $37,500,000 Lustron Corp. unless the Attorney General conducted such an inquiry.

Carl G. Strandlund, former president of the giant prefabricated housing concern, commented:

"I welcome any investigation which will permit us to present the real facts to the public" he added:

"Lustron has been smeared and slandered to the point where I believe it is time that the public should know the true facts."

These were only parts of a swiftly developing legal battle over Lustron which, in default on $36,500,000 in Government loans, was sold to the Reconstruction Finance Corp. for six million dollars, and then was thrown into involuntary bankruptcy.

In Chicago today, United States District Judge Philip L. Sullivan issued an injunction barring the RFC from taking possession of the Lustron plant.

But, almost at the same time in Columbus, United States Marshal Harold K. Claypool said he delivered possession of the plant to the Government agency at 11 a. m. today.

RFC originally obtained a court receivership of Lustron. After months of receivership operation at continued losses, Judge Underwood ordered sale of the plant. Subsequently, Judge Sullivan barred the sale to RFC and then ordered the plant into bankruptcy.

Judge Underwood said he asked the Attorney General to investigate the case of the giant prefabricated housing concern last May 25. He said he had received no reply.

"I have been of the opinion that the Attorney General should be given a proper opportunity to investigate the case before this court should take any further steps toward impaneling a grand jury for the purpose of the investigation," Judge Underwood said. . . .

"Unless the department desires to undertake such an investigation, it is the intention of this court to impanel a jury to fully and completely investigate the entire transaction to determine whether criminal charges should be brought."

M'Arthur Bid As Coordinator For Far East

New Haven, Conn., June 14 (AP). Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) proposed tonight the appointment of Gen. Douglas MacArthur as coordinator of American policies in the Far East.

Keynoting the Connecticut Republican convention here, Knowland asserted that the United States should serve notice "we have no intention of recognizing the Communist regime in China."

He contended that on the China issue, the State Department has been "more interested in 'saving face' than in saving freedom."

Knowland's address opened a convention in which there was keen competition for the nomination for Governor. In Connecticut, candidates are nominated by State conventions rather than by primaries as in most other States.

In addition to a State ticket, the convention will make nominations for two United States Senate seats when the balloting starts Thursday.

Fighting it out for the chance to run against Gov. Chester Bowles, the prospective Democratic nominee, were five candidates. Regarded as the favorite was United States Representative John Davis Lodge, a brother of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., of Massachusetts. Others in the race are former Gov. James C. Shannon, former State Chairman J. Kenneth Bradley, William A. Purtell, president of the Manufacturers Association of Connecticut, and Mayor Raymond E. Snyder of Waterbury.

Leading candidates for the senatorial nominations are former Representative Joseph E. Talbot, favored to oppose Senator Brein McMahon (D.) for a six-year term, and Prescott Bush, banker and member of the Yale Corp. Bush was seeking the nomination for the remaining two years in the seat now held by William A. Benton (D.), an interim appointee.

New Formosa Policy Seen A Possibility

Tokyo, June 14 (NYHT).—General MacArthur's headquarters believes there is reason to hope for reconsideration of American policy concerning Formosa, Nationalist China's last stronghold.

It is believed here a formula for saving Formosa from Communist occupation will be discussed at the forthcomig visit in Tokyo of Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, General Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and John Foster Dulles, Republican consultant to Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

Officials here believe there is still time to save Formosa since intelligence reports indicate the Chinese Communists have postponed their invasion at least beyond mid-summer, and probably longer.

If the United States—backed by the United Nations—takes a firm stand in Formosa, the Communists can be deterred altogether from attacking, headquarters officials believe. They are reluctant to go into detail on the nature of this "firm stand."

It has frequently been proposed here that the United States declare Formosa to be under jurisdiction of the Supreme Command, which acts as representative of all Allied powers pending a peace treaty with Japan. This would be justifiable, it is asserted, on the ground that the situation under which the original agreement on Formosa was made has vastly changed with the Communist triumph in China.

Also being studied is the possibility of neutralizing Formosa with a kind of Monroe Doctrine declaration stating that use of this island by any foreign power would be considered a hostile act.

50 Nations Pledge $20,000,000 Fund For Point 4 Aid

Lake Success, June 14 (NYHT).—A voluntary 18-month fund of $20,012,500 to expand United Nations technical assistance to build better living standards around the world was put together here today by pledges from 50 countries, as they completed a three-day conference.

The fund was left open for further gifts, reported to be under consideration by six more countries. The conference went on to approve a formula for dividing up the fund. Under this, the first 10 million dollars collected and 70 percent of the next 10 million dollars will be split up on an automatic basis of 23 percent for the U. N., and the rest to five specialized agencies—Food and Agriculture Organization, 29 percent; World Health Organization, 22 percent; U. N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, 14 percent; International Labor Organization, 1 percent.

Upward Trend Is Forecast In Department Store Profits

A reversal of the recent declining profit trend among department stores was seen by a Harvard retailing expert yesterday.

Malcolm P. McNair told the Controllers' Congress, financial unit of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, that department stores "bore the brunt" of last year's recession, and most stores are viewing the coming months with "considerable optimism."

He said the thirtieth annual survey of the Harvard University Bureau of Business Research showed that the "declining profit trend apparently is not being carried over to 1950."

In another talk, Bert Sarazen, director of publicity and public relations for the Hecht Co., stores, told the delegates that "profits are the by-product of good management, good merchandising, good publicity and good public service.

"They shouldn't have to be jacked up," he said. "They should just naturally accrue, like Grandma's hash."

Last night, the more than 700 delegates heard Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson call for the elimination of "hidden subsidies" to newspapers, magazines, parcel post and post card users to put his department on a pay-as-you-go basis.

He declared that when the postal service was established, it was the "intent of Congress" that the department be "self-sustaining."

The Cabinet officer spoke at the Statler Hotel at a banquet sponsored by the National Capital Group of Controllers. He was introduced by Dr. Paul Douglas, president of American University, who was toastmaster.

Donaldson spelled out his complaint against the low revenue type users:

"The excess expenditure over revenue in the handling of second class mail—newspapers and magazines—is more than 200 million dollars per annum.

"The excess expenditure over revenue in the handling of third-class mail—circulars and advertising matter—is more than 135 million dollars per annum.

"The excess expenditure over revenue in the handling of the postal and postcard is closely approaching 70 million dollars per annum.

"The excess expenditure in the handling of fourth-class mail—parcel post—is 100 million dollars per annum, and the excess expenditure over revenue derived from the special service transactions (money order, registered mail and special delivery) is about 65 million dollars per annum.

The Controllers' Congress meeting is scheduled to wind up today at the Hotel Statler.

Postmasters From 3 States Elect Officers

The tri-State convention of the Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia branches of the National League of District (rural) Postmasters closed its three-day meeting at the Washington Hotel yesterday with election of officers.

New officers included:

Virginia: Miss Mary Ann Nichols, Hamilton, president; James V. Lewis, Prospect, first vice president; J. Russell Parker, Providence Forge, second vice president; Mrs. Lulu Griffis, Midway Island, secretary-treasurer; and Mrs. Viola Pick, Rustburg, Mrs. Jane Mason, Colonial Beach, and Williams E. Massie, Tyro, executive committee.

Maryland: George A. Hohn, Port Deposit, president; S. T. Culver, Hebron, first vice president; Charles A. Snavely, Baldwin, second vice president; W. R. Langrall, Bivalve, third vice president, and Mrs. Mildred V. Grushon, Graceham, secretary. The officers from the executive committee.

West Virginia: W. H. Ryan, Hendricks, president; Mrs. Blanche Childers, Copen, first vice president; Wash Hornick, jr., Anawalt, second vice president; Mrs. Cleda Nelson, Riverton, third vice president; Mrs. Louise Bumphrey, Burlington, secretary-treasurer. The officers will appoint the executive committee.

Military Works Bill Is Sent to The White House

A 596-million-dollar military works outhorization bill yesterday awaited White House action.

Final step was Senate acceptance Tuesday of a conference report recommending a compromise bill. It was done by a voice vote.

Included is authority to move the Naval Observatory from Washington to Charlottesville, Va. For this move the bill authorizes 7 million dollars.

District V.F.W. Honors Sutphin

The District Department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars last night honored its commander, Robert F. Sutphin, at a dinner in the Casino Royal.

Sutphin's term of office expires during the annual convention now under way. A successor will be elected Friday evening. The dinner was attended by about 85 persons, including Dr. A. B. Bowyer, of Charleston, W. Va., surgeon general of the VFW.

Major business today, the third of the convention, will be committee reports and a business meeting at 7 p. m. in the Sapphire Room of the Mayflower Hotel.

Yoshida Wants GIs After Peace Treaty

Tokyo, June 14 (NYHT).—Premier Shigeru Yoshida said today Japan would, after a peace treaty, be "willing to cooperate with the United States in providing for security against Communist aggression, whether from within or without."

He made it plain that his Liberal (conservative) party wanted the continued presence of American troops in the period immediately following the separate peace with the West

USAF Helping Test Europe's Air Defense

United States Air Force B-29 and B-50 bombers are being used regularly to test western Europe's new air defenses, defense officials disclosed yesterday.

They said Dutch forces are trying out their newly constructed radar detection stations and British-developed interceptor fighters against the American bombers.

Results are kept secret, but are expected to be significant, because Russia's best long-range bomber is believed to be a copy of the B-29.

The exercises were described as the "first example of direct American cooperation in the training schemes of the western European air force.

The American Superforts are engaging in mock combat with Dutch planes all over Holland on regular round-trip training flights to Heligoland Island in the North Sea.

The Dutch try to detect the American planes with radar and then to intercept with twin jet "Meteor" fighter planes. Both the bombers and fighters have gun cameras to permit evaluation of their mock aerial battles.

A Defense Department announcement said the exercises were started "inasmuch as a considerable part of a proposed radar cover over Dutch territory has now been completed and the pilots of the newly formed Dutch Meteor squadrons have reached sufficient proficiency in modern interceptor tactics."

Defense Aim Of Finletter Is Teamwork

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

In his maiden speech as Secretary of the Air Force, Thomas K. Finletter yesterday made it plain he will be a "team player" for a balanced defense force—not a special pleader for mighty air power.

Addressing the University of Pennsylvania commencement exercises in Philadelphia yesterday, Finletter gave what was obviously a considered expression of his national defense views—a policy speech to set the tone of his administration of the Air Force.

Since appointed Secretary in mid-April, Finletter has given no interviews, held no press conferences, and made no speeches. Aides told inquiring reporters he "wants to get his feet on the ground first."

"We must not have each service carrying out its assignments all by itself with a sharp division of responsibility such as used to characterize the operations of allies", said the USAF Secretary. "Each task calls for the integrated effort of all three services, so as to get the maximum combined striking power of all the services in the carrying out of the agreed-upon work. Loyalty to a service, however important, must be subordinated to the interest of the country."

In a scholarly address outlining his views on security, Finletter declared that the most important element of the "defense team" must be "a defensive counter-striking force of unquestioned power."

"To fail to have on hand and to build for a striking force which will command real respect is to play with the safety of the country and of the free world," he declared.

Finletter, who spoke after receiving a doctor of laws degree from his alma mater, stressed that the primary need for our maintaining strong defenses is the prevention of war. Declaring that the "curve of military power is rising everywhere," he declared the United States must keep pace.

He also raised and discussed one of the main issues of the Air-Force-Navy row on Capitol Hill last year—the Navy charge that planning for mass atomic bombing of an enemy's cities as a major plank of our strategy is "immoral." This has been raised by "some thoughtful citizens," and must be carefully considered, he said.

"I do not believe that the moral position of the United States will be judged by the kind of weapons we have in our arsenal or the kind of strategy and tactics we use," Finletter declared. "I believe our moral position will be judged by the vigor with which we push our efforts to achieve peace.

"There is no merit, moral or otherwise, in having a defense force which is no good . . . . . We would be faithless to our duty to ourselves and to our friends and allies of the free world if we were not to have a military force which would make it very plain to all that it would be a mistake to break the peace."

U. N. Body Reports Inability to Form Jerusalem Regime

Lake Success, June 14 (AP).—The United Nations Trusteeship Council approved today a formal report to the General Assembly saying in effect that it is unable to set up an international regime in Jerusalem.

The report noted opposition by both Israel and Jordan, the countries which actually occupy the divided Holy City. It said implementation of the council's internationalization plan "would seem to be seriously compromised under present conditions."

Tower to Lose Moat

London, June 14 (U.P.).—The vegetable gardens in the moat around the ancient Tower of London soon will be a thing of the past. The tower's governors ruled that the moat will be replated by grass.

London, June 14 (AP).—The British government disclosed tonight it has signed contracts with Russia under which the Soviet Union will step up timber exports to this country by 50 percent.

Nationalists Warn Blockade Is Still On

Taipei, Formosa, June 14 (U.P.).—The Nationalists issued a stern warning to neutral shipping today that vessels attempting to run the blockade into Communist-occupied Shanghai will be sunk as enemies.

A government spokesman called the warning a new declaration of war against the Communists, made to remind neutrals that the Nationalists still consider the China coast blockaded.

The defiant warning came as the Nationalists struck at the Communists with renewed vigor. Naval forces bombarded a Communist-held port south of Shanghai and "turned it into a sea of flames," while planes and ships pounded invasion preparations opposite Formosa.

The air force announced that thousands of leaflets were dropped on the mainland warning civilians to stay away from "docks, airfields and military installations" which the air force said would be attacked heavily.

The air force said Tuesday was its busiest day since its Shanghai bombings in the spring and that waves of fighters took advantage of good weather to bomb and strafe Communist installations.

The navy announced that its ships were concentrating attacks on the Chekiang coastal town of Haimen, 120 miles south of Shanghai, where "close-range broadside barrages" set the town ablaze.

A-Blast Theory Discounted in Strange Haze Over Pacific

Honolulu, June 14 (AP).—That mysterious haze shrouding Hawaii and more than a million square miles of the Pacific is not radioactive. Scientists' best guess is that it's caused by a volcanic eruption.

Meteorologists and other scientific men are certain no atomic explosion has any connection with the strange cloud.

Two Geiger counters show no trace of radioactivity.

The Weather Bureau in Honolulu said the eruption of Mauna Loa on the island of Hawaii could be responsible for the smog-like condition. It's not sure yet—but the evidence points that way.

The famed volcano began its record eruption June 1 and it hasn't stopped yet. Two sharp earthquakes were recorded there yesterday.

Weather Bureau Meteorologist R. H. Simpson said planes will go up today to take air samples at several altitudes in the haze screen for content analysis tests.

The haze area, he said, extends from Wake Island eastward about 2000 to 2500 miles. The eastern limit is about 400 miles east of Honolulu. Its north-south range is about 600 miles, with Johnston Island on the southern edge.

Over Hawaii the haze blanket breaks cleanly at about 8000 feet. The air is clear above that altitude. Over Wake, however, the condition reaches to 16,000 feet, Simpson said.

The theory that the cloud might have been caused by an atomic explosion was knocked out by Dr. George O. Burr, biochemist at the Hawaiian Sugar Planters Association experiment station.

Two Geiger counters there showed no trace of radioactivity, he said. These counters would detect even exceedingly faint traces of atomic radiation in the atmosphere, he added.

Simpson said the theory meteorologists have so far is this:

Mauna Loa's eruption threw high into the air. When molten lava hits the sea, steam clouds boiled up. Minute salt particles were carried into suspension miles in the air.

If the salt and sulphur particles reached into the stratosphere—60,000 feet high—prevailing winds would have carried them westward beyond Wake.

When the particles settled into the troposphere — below 50,000 feet—prevailing winds blowing the other way carried them back toward Hawaii.

When the particles settled below 8000 feet—where surface northeast trade winds normally blow—they smoke, steam and sudphur fumes thickened into the haze belt.

That would be because the trade winds stopped blowing Sunday and a virtual calm covers the entire haze area.

J. C. Ireton, Civil Aeronautics Administration construction chief, reported the haze so thick at Wake on Monday that one pilot asked for full field lights to make a daylight approach and landing.

Ireton said the pilot missed on his first approach with visibility reduced to one mile by the haze. When field lights were turned up to full brilliance—1,400,000 candlepower—the pilot sighted the Wake landing strip from two and one-half miles and landed without trouble.

High temperatures and nearly dead calm accompanied the haze at Wake, said Ireton, who returned here today.

In Washington, Weather Bureau officials also leaned to the theory that the maze has tied up with a volcanic eruption.

In 1882, they said, a haze spread over the world after the eruption of Krakatoa in Sunda Strait between Java and Sumatra.

This eruption sent dust into the air that caused brilliant sunrise and sunset glows. Dust remained in the air for three years.

Barrett Discloses Wire-Tap Inquiry

GOP Aid for Bill

Senate Vote On Security Due Tuesday

The Senate yesterday agreed to start voting on amendments to the Social Security expansion bill at 4 p. m. Tuesday as Republicans indicated "almost unanimous" support of the measure.

The agreement to start voting limited debate on each amendment to 10 minutes and apparently assured passage late Tuesday or on the following day.

A Senate Republican conference on the measure helped pave the way to passage. Senator Eugene D. Millikin (Colo.), GOP conference chairman, said most Republican Senators will vote for the bill, though some of them will press amendments, and a lot of them consider it a "stop gap" proposition.

The bill brings 10 million more persons under Social Security and liberalizes benefits. In a move toward ultimate "universal" coverage, Millikin and Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) agreed to introduce a resolution providing for further study of the Social Security structure, looking to another overhaul in the next Congress. The study will cover proposals for a "pay-as-you-go" system, embracing all Americans.

Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) told newsmen he will probably join with Senate Majority Whip Francis Myers (Pa.) in proposing amendments to the pending bill raising the present $3000 taxable wage base and providing benefits for permanent and totally disabled persons.

The House-passed bill increased the base on which payroll taxes are levied to $3600 and provides disability benefits, but the Senate bill follows present law on those points.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) suggested some compromise increase in the wage base may be worked out on the Senate floor but said he regarded disability benefits as "one of the issues."

By The Associated Press

Maj. Robert Barrett, head of the Washington Police Department, said yesterday an investigation has been made into whether wiretapping figured in the 1947 Senate investigation of Howard Hughes' wartime plane contracts. He said a report has been sent to the Justice Department.

The Justice Department refused to discuss it.

Barrett said the inquiry was intended to determine whether members of the Senate committee had made independent use of a District police officer to tap Hughes' telephone wires during his stay in Washington.

Senators Brewster (R.) of Maine and Ferguson (R.) of Michigan, who figured prominently in the months-long congressional hearing, denied any wires had been tapped to their knowledge.

Barrett declined to tell a reporter what finding is contained in the report.

Wiretapping, unless specifically authorized by the Attorney General in such cases as treason or kidnaping, is punishable by a fine of $10,000 and two years in prison under the Federal Communications Act.

[Editor's Note: Major Barrett's comments confirm disclosures made by columnist Drew Pearson and published in yesterday's Washington Post.]

West Virginia Bomber Crash Kills 9 Fliers

Circleville, W. Va., June 14 (AP). — An Air Force bomber crashed against West Virginia's highest mountain at dawn today and all nine men on board were killed.

Eight burned bodies were found in the Utah-bound B-25. Another body was thrown clear into a tree almost at the top of Craggy Spruce Knob.

Witnesses said the twin-engined plane en route from Olmsted Air Base, Middletown, Pa., for a stopover at Offutt Base in Nebraska, struck about 5 a. m. (EDT). The ship's home base was Hill Air Force field near Ogden, Utah.

Scene of the crash was about 4 miles from Circleville, which is 25 miles from the Virginia-West Virginia border deep in the Allegheny Mountains.

Spruce Knob is the Mountain State's highest point—4860 feet. The crash was 400 feet below the summit.

Storage Space Lack Threatens Maryland Wheat Price Support

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Maryland wheat growers are aroused over reports that they probably will lose the benefits of Government price supports this year.

Maryland farmers next week will start harvesting their winter wheat, which the Government Crop Reporting Board estimated last Friday would be about 6,400,000 bushels.

Under normal conditions that would mean about 15 million dollars to Maryland farmers. If denied price support benefits, the loss might run into the millions.

The situation results from the lack of storage facilities. The grain must be stored in approved facilities to make the Government crop support loan.

Marylanders have historically stored their grain in commercial storage in Baltimore and Philadelphia. However, all storage there is filled with last year's crop.

This week three railroads, the Baltimore & Ohio, the Pennsylvania and the Western Maryland, placed an embargo on Maryland wheat destined for terminal elevators in both Baltimore and Philadelphia if consigned for storage.

Government officials have promised to make a drive to sell last year's wheat. However, Maryland wheat is a soft winter wheat. Exporters want only hard wheat. Furthermore, last year's crop is garlicky, adding to the difficulty of sales.

Sawyer Urges RFC For His Department

Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer asked Congress yesterday to transfer the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to his department to assure a "top level check" of RFC lending activities, now under fire in Congress.

He testified before the Senate Executive Expenditures Committee against a resolution which would kill President Truman's reorganization plan to put the RFC in the Commerce Department. It becomes law July 9 unless vetoed by a constitutional majority of the House or Senate.

The plan was opposed by Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) chairman of a Senate Banking Subcommittee that is investigating the RFC and several of its loans. The agency has been criticized for loans to Lustron Corp., the Kaiser-Frazer automobile company and the Texmass oil firm, among others.

Fulbright denounced the lack of authority over the RFC and its lending activities. But he opposed the transfer plan on grounds that Mr. Truman's plan to aid small business really is a subsidy and should be known as such.

Furthermore, he said, the "future of the RFC is in doubt" and no action should be taken until his subcommittee acts.

Sawyer urged the transfer to make certain there is no "variance" between RFC's business policies and those laid down by the Commerce Department for the Government as a whole. He also said the Commerce Department could provide RFC directors with needed background information on business.

Fulbright called for clarification of the "fundamental purpose" of the RFC and said its lending activities should be divorced from Government subsidies and "direct payments" to industry.

"Should there be an RFC?" he said, "is a far more important question than whether the RFC should be transferred."

Chairman John L. McClellan, (D., Ark.), of the Executives Expenditures Committee, said the transfer would result in RFC directors and the Commerce Secretary "passing the buck back and forth" on policy questions.

Fulbright complained that the present RFC law is "definitely defective" in that it gives the RFC only "general" guidance on what type of loans should be approved.

Counterfeit Ring Tied To Chicago Gamblers

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

More information on the underworld came to light yesterday, this time about counterfeiters.

Secret Service Chief U. E. Baughman reported to Congress some time ago that bogus money is being turned out at the rate of $100,000 a month and that about $1,550,000 worth of it had been seized in a 17-month period.

In testimony to a Senate Appropriations subcommittee, Baughman said:

"I consider counterfeiters the cleverest of all criminals. Invariably they have long criminal records and a shrewd knowledge of police methods. They are cunning, wary and usually well concealed with their plants and it takes time and skilled investigators to track them down and secure a successful prosecution."

Gambling, Narcotics Link

The Secret Service head said "more and more criminals are turning to counterfeiting." He told the senators that anyone with "a criminal tie in another section apparently can go" to New York or Chicago, centers of the counterfeit notes and then go off to an area and pass them."

Baughman said counterfeiters in the Chicago area include a "number of gamblers and also people who deal in narcotics."

A Senate Crime Committee source commented yesterday that so far that group has not delved into the bogus money business. But this source added that if any evidence came to hand to show a tie-in with gambling, narcotics or other allied activities under investigation the committee would move in fast

Faked Ration Stamps

Baughman told the Senators that many of the counterfeiters today are former black marketeers who turned out bogus OPA ration stamps and books during the war.

Also in the same hearings, now released, was testimony by U. S. Narcotics Commissioner H. J. Anslinger on the narcotics problem.

Anslinger told the Senators that the latest problem involves synthetic drugs, about 14 in number, now classed as narcotics. The drugs were discovered in Germany during the war and now are manufactured for medical purposes, he said, but prescriptions are being forged to divert them into illegal channels.

Cocaine From Peru

He also said that this country was recently flooded with cocaine smuggled from Peru to New York. A batch of Peruvians in New York were rounded up and sent to the penitentiary, he added.

Meanwhile, there was this development in the case of William Molasky, St. Louis race news distributor, who testified before the Senate Crime Committee Tuesday he had contributed $2500 to the 1948 campaign of Missouri's Gov. Forrest Smith.

The man to whom Molasky said he gave the money, John Hendren, Missouri Democratic Chairman, told the Associated Press his recollection was that Morris Shenker, St. Louis lawyer, introduced Molasky to him as a St. Louis businessman and said Molasky wanted to contribute.

Hendren said that, as he recalled it, either Shenker or Molasky gave him $2000 rather than $2500. Shenker appeared as Molasky's attorney before the Senate group. Some time ago he was here as attorney for St. Louis "betting commissioner" James J. Carroll when he testified before another Senate group.

'Unspectacular' Pervert Probe Promised by Hoey Committee

Senator Clyde R. Hoey (D., N. C.) yesterday promised a thorough probe of perverts in Government but said it would not become "a public spectacle."

The investigations subcommittee headed by Hoey was assigned by the Senate Expenditures Committee to conduct the Senate-ordered probe of homosexuals and other moral perverts in Government service.

The inquiry grew out of testimony presented by Metropolitan Police Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the Washington vice squad, that there were 5000 homosexuals in Washington, with 75 percent in Government jobs.

Hoey said he had instructed his investigations staff to start immediatedly to collect and put together "all available data concerning the presence of homosexuals in the Government service."

He added that the subcommittee plans to confer promptly with Government officials and others who are in a position to help in the inquiry.

These conferences, will be executive sessions, however, Hoey announced.

Hoey said the investigation will be complete and thorough. He said every effort would be made to get all the facts on which to make a report to the Senate "at the earliest practicable date."

"The paramount objective is to protect the Government and the public interest," Hoey said.

"However, in pursuing this task, it is neither the intention nor the desire of the subcommittee to transgress individual rights, to subject any individual to ridicule, or to allow this investigation to become a public spectacle."

May Output 1% Under Boom Record

Industrial production in May climbed within 1 percent of the peacetime record set at the height of the 1948 boom, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

It figured that June output should go eevn higher, if present trends are sustained.

A preliminary estimate by the board, given to the Senate-House Economic Report Committee, showed May production at 193 percent of (meaning 93 percent above) the 1935-39 monthly average.

That was two points higher than the board anticipated in an initial figure May 27, and it indicated the biggest volume of industrial production since the 195 turnout of October-November, 1948.

The new estimate for May reflected a 2 percent rise from April, and a 20-percent recovery from the low mark (161) of last July, the trough of the 1949 "recession."

Gains in May and early June were produced by a further upsurge in production of durable goods, plus a marked recovery in output of such minerals as iron ore and oil.

There also was a small gain in production of nondurable goods—notably textiles, paper, rubber and chemical products.

In the durable field, production of steel and of passenger cars was booming at new record heights, while output of building materials, furniture and household appliances was going strong at advanced levels.

Amerasia Probe Asked

feel that the agitation from Republican quarters for further inquiry into the Amerasia matter is largely political maneuvering, to keep interest alive in the general field of Senator McCarthy's (R., Wis.) charges of Communist infiltration in the Government.

The Democrats, on their part, are anxious to wind up the whole investigation as fast as they can without, however, giving basis for a charge that they have failed to take up each allegation or case in point.

In line with this goal, the investigating subcommittee will call as a witness in the next week or two John S. Service, State Department diplomat who was arrested but not indicted, in the Amerasia case, and who was the subject of an individual presentation to the subcommittee by McCarthy.

Service is the last such person, specifically accused by McCarthy, who has not been heard by the subcommittee. His appearance was deferred until he completed a long and detailed loyalty review procedure before the State Department loyalty board last month.

It is not yet decided whether Service's hearing will be public or behind closed doors. Hitherto, it has been the policy of Subcommittee Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) to hear in public the defense of those persons accused in public by McCarthy, as Service was. On the other hand, subcommittee member Lodge (R., Mass.) insisted some six weeks ago that "this show be taken off the road"; i. e., that future hearings be closed. Since then, his view has prevailed and no further open sessions have taken place.

Hickenlooper's demand that Clark and Hoover be heard on the Amerasia matter arises from the fact that their names were mentioned in excerpts made public last weekend from the personal papers of the late James Forrestal, who was Secretary of the Navy when the Amerasia case broke in 1945.

Forrestal's papers disclosed that he intervened in the case to make sure President Truman was fully informed regarding the international significance of the situation. Forrestal wrote that quick arrests in the case might greatly embarrass this country's relations with Russia at the United Nations Charter conference in San Francisco.

He also wrote that he had suggested to Hoover that Hoover have Clark, then chief of the Justice Department's criminal division (and later Attorney General), "see that the President is in full information of all the facts in the matter as well as their implications."

Hoover has said that Forrestal at no time indicated any desire to have the Amerasia case halted. Forrestal's only interest, Hoover said in an interview last Sunday, was to make sure Mr. Truman was fully informed.

Mr. Truman ordered full steam ahead in the case a few days after the Forrestal diary entry on May 28, 1945. Six persons were arrested on June 6 of that year.

In suggesting that both Clark and Hoover be invited to testify, Hickenlooper said the subcommittee ought to have their first-hand version of just what happened.

In a bit of by-play yesterday, McCarthy had an encounter with a man who grabbed him by the shoulder in the Senate Office Building corridor and told him he was "a corrupt man without any morals."

McCarthy shook him off, walked away and departed via an elevator. Later he said he assumed his accoster to be a "crackpot."

The man identified himself to reporters as Robert Beresford, a lawyer of San Jose, Calif. He said he had come to Washington to "expose" McCarthy. He had been seeking, without avail, to testify to the subcommittee about McCarthy's record as a judge in Wisconsin, he explained.

In particular, Beresford has been demanding, by letter, telegram and yesterday, in person, that McCarthy retract charges he made against Ambassador - at - Large Philip C. Jessup, to the effect that he has a pro-Communist record. Beresford termed such an accusation "a monstrous lie."

Erickson Trial Tentatively Set for Monday

New York, June 14 (AP).—Big time gambler Frank Erickson today was ordered to trial Monday on bookmaking and conspiracy charges.

Justice Nathan D. Perlman, who fixed the trial date, indicated he would adjourn the case if no decision were reached by then on Erickson's motion to inspect minutes of the grand jury which indicted Erickson.

However, General Session Judge John A. Mullen later denied the motion, thus apparently assuring that the gambler would go on trial on schedule

Sol Gelb, the gambler's attorney, has said he would ask that the case be put over until after Labor Day.

The 54-year-old admitted bookie pleaded innocent to 60 counts of bookmaking and conspiracy under an information of the New York County grand jury. He admitted to a Senatorial committee that he operates a multi-million-dollar bookmaking business.

Meanwhile, the Appelate Division ordered the release of Harry Richards, $70-a-week employe of Erickson, in bail of $10,000 or less. Richards was being held in $100,000 bail as a material witness.

Associate Justice Albert Cohn termed the bail excessive.

"He is not charged with the commisison of any crime," Cohn ruled. "He has freely testified before the grand jury and there is no sound basis for a finding that he will not be available whenever his testimony is required."

He also noted that Erickson was free in $10,000 bail.

for substantial tax reforms, a national policy favoring increased imports, management policies providing more work incentives and more employment chances for older people, and worker or union policies against featherbedding and in favor of incentive plans.

And underlying the whole hopeful prospect, the report made clear, is the necessity "of keeping people steadily at work'—in other words, the need for avoiding depressions or recessions.

The current report, a product of the CEDS 29-man research and policy committee, did not discuss in detail the ways and means of stabilizing economic growth and prosperity, since the CED has previously issued several reports on the problems involved.

Fifty years ago, the report noted, the average employe received, in terms of 1949 prices, an hourly wage of 49 cents. Today he earns an average of $1.33 an hour. Furthermore, the study concluded, the worker's pay check is probably considerably more than three times as valuable as it was 50 years ago because the quality of goods he buys has improved and the variety has greatly broadened; his comforts and the efficiency of the things he uses—lighting, transportation, communications, entertainment, food—are much improved.

The productivity increase accounting for this gain in real wages was caused by four factors, the report states:

1. Improvement of production methods, in particular the enormous substitution of mechanical energy for human or animal energy. Noted in particular were the increased use of electricity, the development of the internal combustion engine, the moving belt, interchangable parts, new and improved production and office machines, improved farm methods and devices, and advances in sales and merchandising techniques.

2. Increase in capital per worker. This expanded after allowance for price changes, nearly 50 percent in 50 years. About one tenth of the net national product has been plowed back into expanding plant, equipment and inventories. The average amount of capital per worker is now more than $10,000.

3. Improvements of health, training and skill of the labor force. The report noted the broadening of education, the reduction of weekly hours—and hence of workers fatigue—and the lessening of the ratio of unskilled to skilled workers.

4. Improvement of business management methods.

For continued productivity gains of 2.5 percent a year in the future, those four elements must persist, the report argued, and to them must be added a fifth: more- interested workers.

In general, the report found, the prospects in all of those five areas are hopeful.

On the first, "the outlook for rapid technological progress is good . . . Expenditures on technological research have been growing rapidly. They were nine times as large as in 1920 and they are twice as large today as they were in 1940. Important new areas of research are being opened up."

On the second, the continued investment of capital in industry, the prospects are that the community will continue to save enough money—about one-tenth of its net output—for this purpose, whether it is willing to invest those savings in business expansion and renovation. Here, the report said, there is a "serious problem for public policy."

(Current net investment in plant and equipment is running at about 7 percent of net national product, or somewhat less than the 10 percent average the CED report found for the past. The report noted, however, that the trend may be a declining one and that a lesser ratio of investment may suffice for the future. Editor's note.)

The third factor, relating to the health and skill of workers, also has bright prospects. "All in all," the report said, "the outlook is good that the labor force of America will gradually become a more able group of men and women."

"The opportunities for important additional progress are bright" in the fourth element, improved managerial organization and methods.

And, for the fifth and new factor, making workers more interested in their jobs, "the great progress being made in methods of management supports the belief that the interest of employes in their work can be increased."

Nevertheless, the report declared, there are compelling reasons to take certain steps to encourage the increase of output per man-hour, and to make sure that total production increases. Here are 10 of the CED's recommended measures:

1. Stabilize the growth of industry and avoid serious business recessions.

2. Reduce seasonal unemployment. The possibilities of doing this are "great" but the problem is one "for which management must accept an increasing degree of responsibility."

3. Improve the quality of business births and reduce their "infant mortality."

4. Make risk-taking more attractive.

5. Stimulate the more rapid replacement of equipment.

Principal CED recommendations in these last three items had to do with various tax reforms, proposed and discussed in detail in previous CED reports.

6. Increase the ratio of imports into the United States relative to its exports. "Although there are costs to raising imports relative to exports, there are greater costs involved in exporting more than is imported. An excess of exports means that the United States has less to consume and that real wages (and other income as well) have less purchasing power than they would have if every dollar of exports paid for a dollar of imports.

"An increase in imports, by reducing the need for foreign aid, would help to make possible reductions in tax rates and increased incomes after taxes."

The necessary increase in imports to end the need for the United States' gifts to foreign countries "is small as compared with our total output," the report said. "Total imports would still be less than 5 percent of total domestic production, a lower ratio than in the twenties."

7. Provide more employment opportunities for older people. The report was hopeful for a movement of this sort and found "signs that the trend toward earlier retirements may have been checked."

"Management in many companies is making increased efforts to provide jobs for older workers. Increased attention should be paid to this problem."

8. Improve incentives for efficiency among rank-and-file workers. Here the report was pessimistic. It discovered "great areas" in which such incentives are lacking. And it found that the tendency of the last 15 years, fostered by unions, to force promotion on the basis of straight seniority—the mere length of employment of a worker—"has seriously weakened incentives among the hourly-rated employes in many branches of industry."

The report called for retention of management's right to promote on the basis of ability and efficiency, and for replacement of day-work pay with piecework rates.

9. Develop regular methods of drawing on the knowledge and training of the labor force.

10. Abolish make-work rules and featherbedding. Though this problem is not widespread in American industry, the report said, it is nevertheless serious in some industries. "Unions would find it advantageous to agree to abolish present make-work rules in return for wage increase. The union members as a whole would be as well off and the community as a whole, including the workers in other industries, would be better off because the output of goods would be larger."

The report was drafted by a subcommittee headed by William A. Patterson, president of United Air Lines. Members of the CED Research and Policy Committee, which issued the statement, are Marion B. Folsom, chairman, who is treasurer of the Eastman Kodak Co.; Beardsley Ruml, vice chairman; Patterson; John D. Biggers, president, Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co.; James F. Brownlee, partner, J. H. 3 More Swimming Pools Are Opened By Interior Dept.

Three more public swimming pools were opened yesterday afternoon by the Interior Department on a nonsegregated basis. There was no incident.

The three yesterday were the Francis Junior High School pool, Anacostia Park pool and the Takoma pool. Last week the East Potomac, Banneker and McKinley pools were opened on a bi-racial basis without any difficulty. All are operated by Government Services, Inc., for Interior.

Park Police reported last night that there were a few Negro swimmers at the East Potomac and Anacostia pools and that the Francis, McKinley and Banneker were mainly attended by Negroes.

Judge Jackson Given Award by Alma Mater

Judge Joseph Raymond Jackson of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals yesterday was awarded the C. Thomas Jubilarian Medal for "outstanding achievement" by Manhattan College.

The jurist, a graduate of that institution, was appointed to the Federal bench in 1938.

Egypt Cotton Market Cornered by 2 Men; Many Bankrupted

Alexandria, Egypt, June 14 (AP).—Two rich Egyptian pashas were credited today with cornering the Alexandria cotton futures market at a potential profit to themselves reckoned as high as $28 million. The corner bankrupted many small dealers and caused the cotton exchange to suspend operations for a time today.

Speculators caught short were prevented by a retroactive government decree four days ago from making deliveries in cotton of types not specified in futures contracts held by the pashas—members of Egypt's top-shelf nobility.

The venture sent prices of Ashmouni-type cotton up nearly 100 percent in three hours and bankrupted smaller dealers.

Cotton exchange offices here closed down temporarily while seeking clarification of the Cabinet edict that saved the cornering scheme from possible collapse.

(New York brokers said they thought the Egyptian cotton corner would have little or no effect on their operations but expressed keen interest in it.)

Ashmouni-type cotton—a middle staple variety as compared with Egypt's famous fine long staple—was bought and sold for about 15 Egyptian pounds (43.05) a hundredweight in March. It closed yesterday at more than 28 pounds (80.36).

The two mainpulators—Mohamed Farghali Pasha and Ali Yehia Pasha—were reported by some cotton traders to have a paper profit of 10 million pounds (28 million dollars) in this first effective corner of Egyptian cotton in the present generation.

Some cotton mills sold their Ashmouni stocks for quick profits and shut down to wait for lower prices, meanwhile throwing their employes out of work, trade sources said.

ASTHMA MUCUS Loosened WHILE YOU SLEEP

Don't let coughing, sneezing, choking, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma ruin your sleep and energy another day or night without trying MENDACO. This great medicine is not a smoke, injection or spray, but works through the blood, thus reaching the lungs and bronchial tubes. Usually the first dose starts helping nature immediately 3 ways: 1. Helps loosen and remove thick strangling mucus. 2. Thus promotes freer breathing and sounder, more refreshing sleep. 3. Helps alleviate coughing, wheezing, sneezing. Get MENDACO from your druggist.

TWA SALUTES SAFETY RECORD OF SCHEDULED AIRLINES OF THE UNITED STATES

36 Aviation Safety Awards for 1949 announced by the National Safety Council. The Council's report, in part, follows:

"CHICAGO, June 14.—Thirty-six U. S. air lines today were named winners of the National Safety Council's 1949 aviation safety awards in recognition of their contribution to safe air transportation.

Thirty-five of these domestic, territorial and overseas air carriers, flying scheduled passenger runs, went through the entire year of 1949 without a passenger or crew fatality, accumulating a total of almost six billion passenger-miles. A passenger-mile represents one passenger carried one mile.

Although it failed to complete 1949 without a fatal accident, American Airlines set a new all-time record by flying 4,476,739,000 passenger-miles between Dec. 28, 1946, and Nov. 29, 1949, when its record was broken. American will receive a four-billion-mile award.

Two other air lines will receive awards for two billion miles as well as for completing 1949 without a fatality. They are United Air Lines with 2,098,210,000 passenger-miles since June 17, 1948, and Pan American Airways with 2,085,112,000 passenger-miles since April 15, 1948.

The billion-mile awards are based on multiples of two billion miles of safe operation.

In addition to a perfect record in 1949, three air lines were given special citations for reaching five-year anniversaries of operation without fatal accident. They were:

Hawaiian Airlines, which added 1949 to its all-time record for consecutive years of safe flying to win the first 20-year award ever given. Hawaiian has never had an accident since establishment on Nov. 11, 1929, and at the end of the year had flown 265,020,000 passenger-miles without a fatality.

Mid-Continent Airlines, which qualified for the 15-year award by finishing 1949 with its record unblemished. Mid-Continent has not had a fatal accident since Nov. 15, 1934, and has accumulated 484,612,000 passenger-miles.

Braniff Airways, which completed 1949 without mishap to win a 10-year award. Braniff has flown 1,357,506,000 passenger-miles since its last fatal accident on March 26, 1939.

The foregoing citations are based on multiples of five years.

Among other air lines which received awards for completing 1949 without a fatality, Colonial Airlines led in consecutive years of safe operation and Trans World Airlines had accumulated the most passenger-miles. At the end of the year, Colonial had operated 19 years and eight months with a perfect record since its last fatality on April 18, 1930, and Trans World had rolled up 3,440,872,000 passenger-miles since March 11, 1947."

In addition to the foregoing references to American Airlines, United Airlines, Pan American Airways, Hawaiian Airlines, Mid-Continent Airlines and Braniff Airways, the Council named the following U. S. flag carriers, "which received awards for completing their 1949 scheduled passenger carrying operations without a passenger or crew fatality:

	Safe Miles Flown (in millions)

Absenteeism in House Group Blocks Vote on Tidelands Bill

Absenteeism blocked a vote in the House Rules Committee yesterday on the States' rights tidelands oil bill and Representative John E. Lyle (D., Tex.) protested it was a deliberate stall by the opposition.

The bill would give the various States the lion's share of rich oil deposits off their coastlines. It would upset three Supreme Court rulings that the Federal Government has "paramount rights" over such areas.

Lyle demanded a Rules Committee vote to clear the bill for immediate floor action, explaining he must make an urgent trip to Texas.

While he was talking, Representative Ray J. Madden (D., Ind.) walked out of the room. It reduced committee attendance to six of its 12 members, less than a quorum, and a vote was impossible. Lyle angrily objected that the opposition deliberately broke a quorum to prevent committee action.

Several other Congressmen made arguments for and against the measure.

Representative Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.), author of the bill, urged its approval on the grounds that the Supreme Court's decisions—made against California, Texas and Louisiana—also cast doubt on the title of offshore or reclaimed lands of other States.

Representative Ed Gossett (D., Tex.) argued that until Congress passes some controlling legislation, the court's decisions raise questions on title to fishing, gravel and other seabed rights now exercised by the States.

Representative Emanuel Cellar (D., N. Y.) contended the bill is legally unsound and "would unsettle all our notions about State boundaries."

Representative Sam Hobbs (D., Ala.) denounced the bill as a "grab." He said no one owns areas beyond the internationally-used 3-mile limit but the Federal Government has control of defense matters inside that area.

Alexandria Boy Drowns Trying to Find Fishing Line

A 14-year-old Alexandria boy drowned yesterday while trying to swim for a fishing line which had floated away.

The body of Earl Jackson, 932 N. Columbus st., was recovered by the Alexandria Rescue Squad in the Potomac south of the Braddock Light & Power Co., plant at about 4:30 p. m., three hours after he disappeared. He was pronounced dead by Dr. John A. Sims, Alexandria coroner.

Police said two boys who were fishing with young Jackson, reported he plunged into the river when his fishing line dropped from his hands and began floating down stream.

Peace Hopes Rise In D. C. Milk Strike

issue debate, management telegraphed a series of questions to the union which demanded to know why the milk drivers wanted to return to work at Lucerne, Thompson's, Richfield, Alexandria, Model Farms and Embassy Dairies, while striking Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, Harvey's, and Wakefield.

The dairies also asked what the union's "present strategy" meant, and did the union no longer intend to negotiate a working agreement with the entire industry?

Yesterday morning, at 11, the union replied that it had no intention of answering "quiz" telegrams; that, strike or lockout, the union men were ready to return to work at six of the dairies; that it would not participate any further "in any long-distance collective bargaining"; and that it was willing to meet with management "in good faith bargaining to resolve the issues."

Ready to Talk

At 5 p. m., management responded that it was "concerned with getting milk back into the hands of the public . . ."; had never refused to bargain as an industry group; and was ready "at all times" to sit down at the conference table to discuss the issues.

Shortly afterward, the mediators got the negotiators to agree to get back to real collective bargaining.

The correspondence was conducted for management by Frank J. Sheehan, negotiator for Lucerne, assisted by Attorney Arthur B. Hanson, and for union, by Eugene R. Hubbard, secretary-treasurer of Local 246, AFL Brotherhood of Teamsters, assisted by Attorney Martin F. O'Donoghue.

Angry Mothers Ask Pittsburgh Strike Accord

Pittsburgh, June 14 (AP).—Crusading young housewives and mothers moved in on the milk strike today, demanding that negotiators end a six-day-old dairy workers walkout and resume milk deliveries.

Led by Mrs. Nelson Bennett, 29-year-old mother of two, the hastily organized band arranged to take their demand right to the negotiations table in a downtown hotel.

Both union and company officials agreed to give the women a hearing.

Meanwhile, hundreds of telegrams from angry housewives poured in. They were sent in response to an appeal by Mrs. Fred C. Houston, president of the Allegheny County Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Houston immediately rose to Mrs. Bennett's assistance after the housewive's group began to form.

Mrs. Bennett said Mrs. Houston "We just can't sit at home and do nothing. We're going to find and settle their differences like out why these men can't sit down assured her of the support of the entire federation's membership. She declared:
gentlemen and let the milk start flowing again to our babies."

Milk continued to trickle into Pittsburgh. Certified emergency cases are allowed a quart of milk every other day.

READY, WILLING & ABLE

The Maryland & Virginia Milk Producers Association has been in no way a party to the Washington Area Milk Strike, and at all times has been ready, willing & able to deliver to struck dairy plants an adequate supply of milk, meeting District of Columbia Health Department regulations. The Daily Cost of this Strike to our 1,700 Dairy Farmers amounts to $70,000.

DAD'S DELIGHT VELVET FUDGE CAKE

Kitchen Craft Flour does more than promise. It guarantees better baking! Change to this flour milled exclusively for home baking and see what extra-wonderful homemade goodness it gives . . . with this recipe and all your recipes.

Melt 1 pkg. (½ lb.) chocolate bits over hot water. Sift 1½ cups sifted Kitchen Craft Flour, 1 tsp. soda and 1 tsp. salt. Cream ½ cup shortening, ¾ cup sugar and 1 tsp. vanilla. Add melted chocolate; add 2 eggs, one at a time; beat well. Add dry ingredients and 1 cup buttermilk alternately; mix after each addition. Pour into two 8-inch layer cake pans that have been lightly greased or lined with paper on the bottoms only. Bake in a moderate oven (350°F.) about 30 minutes. Cool on cake racks. For a peppermint flavored fudge cake, add 2 drops oil of peppermint to the shortening and sugar and blend.

VELVET FUDGE ICING: Melt 12 marshmallows and 1 pkg. of chocolate bits (½ lb.) in ½ cup evaporated milk, using a double boiler. Stir until smooth, then cool. Beat just a little before icing cake. Sprinkle with chopped nut meats, plain or colored coconut or crushed peppermint-stick candy. This frosting will remain soft and velvety for days.

District Opens War on Illegal Milk Imports

frantic confusion in their offices and some said their practice suffered for the time spent answering phone calls and filling out certificates.

The employer-union plan authorized physicians to give milk certificates to nursing mothers, infants under 2, those suffering from stomach cancer, ulcers, tuberculosis, persons recovering from operations and, in fact, anyone who doctors feel should have milk regularly.

Pediatricians and obstreticians reported the biggest certificate business yesterday. The rations they allowed for children varied with the individual pediatricians. Most prescribed one quart a day for each infant under 2. Some, however, were allowing one quart for children over 2 and up to 11 and 12 years old.

Late Yesterday Dr. Walter Freeman, president of the District Medical Society, sent an appeal to member doctors urging them not to charge patients for issuing the certificates.

In his letter, Dr. Freeman said "there have been complaints some doctors are charging fees for signing such prescriptions."

But a medical society spokesman said no complaints have thus far come to the society office.

"I ask your forebearance and acceptance of this additional chore in the interest of the public health," Freeman wrote the doctors

The scene at all the nine struck dairies was about the same yesterday. Milk-hungry residents beat a steady path to these milk sources and found the business of getting it was a speedy procedure.

Each dairy counter or refrigerator truck outside the dairy headquarters was manned by union and company personnel. A company person handled the cash register.

Under the emergency plan, policemen came into the act only on emergency home delivery cases.

Cops shuttled the home delivery certificates from doctor's offices to room 5080 at police headquarters where dairy officials picked them up, filled the orders (all on a two-day basis) and delivered to homes.

Most dairies made anywhere from two to six dairy-to-door runs in company trucks driven by union men.

Only seven dairies are making home deliveries with their service limited to designated police precincts.

These dairies and the precincts they cover: Thompson's, 2012 11th st., nw.—precincts 2, 6, 10 and 13; Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, Pennsylvania ave. at 26th st., nw.—precincts 1, 3, 7 and 8; Embassy, 1620 1st st., nw.—precincts 9, 12 and 14; Wakefield, 41 L st., se.—precincts 4, 5 and 11; Model Farms 4115 Kansas ave., nw.—Montgomery County west of 16th st., nw.; Harvey, 38th and Perry sts., Brentwood, Md.—Prince Georges and Montgomery counties east of 16th st.

Lucerne normally supplies only the Safeway Stores. The other dairy, Richfield, has been operating an emergency outlet at 1230 South Capitol st., since Monday.

With the opening of the new milk flow, there was some business decline at Richfield and the nonunion dairies here and in the nearby counties.

More Arlington and Fairfax County residents found it easier to come by milk yesterday as more stores received large shipments from Richmond and Manassas dairies.

In addition, all the adjacent counties went on substantially the same emergency milk-for-needy programs as the District's.

One variation was in Prince Georges County, where the board of health ordered the Harvey Dairy to sell to qualified persons who for special reasons had been unable to secure a doctor's certificate.

Area residents who do not have family physicians may call the District Medical Society for names of doctors who can issue certificates.

Seckinger said he had heard of only one case so far where milk was brought into the District for sale from an unlicensed dairy. That was the case of Hy Posin, who brought 1500 quarts in Baltimore Tuesday for sale at his grocery store at 5756 Georgia ave., nw. Stopped from selling it by Health Department inspectors, he gave it away instead yesterday afternoon at the Silver Spring fire station on Georgia ave. just across the District Line.

The law forbids sale of milk from unlicensed dairies, but it says nothing about giving it away, Seckinger said. He said he would have to seek legal advice on the situation. Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West could not be reached for comment.

Senate Hearing Set On D. C. Milk Prices

Two Washington area witnesses will testify to a Senate subcommittee today about District milk prices.

The hearing will be conducted by the subcommittee investigating utilization of farm products. It is headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa), who has said he did not intend to direct the hearings into the milk strike here.

Witnesses for today's hearing include Joseph Ingram, Arlington lawyer, and J. W. McCarty, official of the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy.

Woman Mayor Vows She'll Put Washington On the Map—Washington, Va., That Is

The women have taken over the government of Washington, Va., with a pledge that the grass will no longer grow in the streets and the town will be put on the map with a capital "W."

Elected decisively over an all-male slate Tuesday, the fair sex will take over the offices of mayor and the six-woman council in September. Mrs. George H. Davis, 28-year-old mother of three, will be mayor of the 250-resident community.

Campaigning on such basic issues as the grass in the streets, dogs running loose and burned-out street lamps, the women brought out 99 of the 122 qualified voters. Trial Justice B. M. Miller was their campaign manager.

Celebrated 200th Anniversary

Last year the town celebrated its 200th anniversary and one of the sore points with the outgoing administration was the failure to attract sufficient attention to this event. The women welcome publicity for themselves as a means of putting the town in the limelight.

The six elected to the Council for two-year terms are Mrs. Louise Price, a school teacher and the only woman with previous experience on the council, having served one term earlier; Mrs. Achsah Miller, housewife; Miss Ruby Jenkins, secretary to the County Agricultural Agent; Mrs. Dorothy Hawkins, housewife; Mrs. Bobbie Critzer, wife of Sheriff J. W. Critzer, and Miss Elizabeth Racer, beauty parlor operator.

The new mayor—or mayoress—is married to a Justice Department attorney, who commutes the 65 miles to Washington, and his desk in the Anti-Trust Division.

Negro Councilman Defeated

In Richmond, Oliver W. Hill, the city's first Negro councilman since the reconstruction era went down to defeat yesterday in his bid for re-election.

At Colonial Beach, L. C. Costenbader, a councilman, was elected mayor. Carl H. Weber, a Washington native, won a seat on the Town Council.

In Vienna, Mayor Jack J. Nichols was re-elected. Robert E. Walker, county high school supervisor was unopposed for mayor in Fairfax, as was W. Swem Elgin in Clifton.

'Good Friday' Deaths Trial Starts Today

William Andrew Tyler, jr., 18, of 2302 Pomeroy st. ne., is scheduled to go on trial today in District Court on charges of first-degree murder in the "Good Friday" deaths at the Lansburgh & Bro. department store.

He is charged with the brutal beatings and stabbings on April 7 of guards Oliver R. Hess and John C. Carpenter at the store.

Joint Alumni Luncheon

The Citadel, Clemson and Wofford Clubs of Washington will hold a joint luncheon today at 12:30 p. m. in the Chicken Hut, 427 11th st. nw., the first of a series by local alumni of the three South Carolina colleges.

Virginia's Eighth District May Be Redrawn

ficial to the 67-year-old Virginian.

The dumbell-shaped District contains 15 counties and 2 cities. Smith's strength is largely in the southern rural counties, including the city of Charlottesville.

Should a big enough part of the southern territory be stripped from the Eighth District, many believe that Smith would be in danger of losing his seat.

As for the increase in Northern Virginia's representation in the legislature there is little doubt. The question is how much.

Arlington County's 1940 population of 57,040 has swollen to 135,240 this year. It has one State Senator and two Delegates. The county's Senator, Charles R. Fenwick, believes the county has a good chance of getting another delegate and the remote possibility of getting another Senator.

Fairfax County's population in 1940 was 40,929. Its 1950 population is 105,722.

It now has one delegate, and shares a senator with Alexandria and Prince William Counties. It probably will get one more delegate and may share its senator with Alexandria alone, letting Prince William share a senator with some other county.

Alexandria's 1940 population was 33,523. It is 61,601 in the 1950 census report. It has one delegate and shares its senator with Fairfax and Prince William.

Like Alexandria, it may get another delegate. Or it may share another delegate with Fairfax

Get FASTEETH at any drug store.

Happy Is The Day When Backache Goes Away . . . .

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Milk Facts

There is strong reason for Federal Mediation Director Ching to intervene personally in the Washington area milk strike. Conciliation efforts so far have been balked by the fact that the dispute has become snarled in a lawyers' battle over the question: Is the stoppage a strike or, in respect of six of the nine closed dairies, a lockout?

As a result, there has been practically no discussion of the basic issues, and it will take someone of Mr. Ching's stature to put the negotiations on the track. Meanwhile, the serious effects of the strike are mounting. Although the plan for emergency milk sales and deliveries seems to be working reasonably well so far, it is an extreme imposition upon doctors and police, and they will be hopelessly swamped if the dispute goes on much longer.

Anyhow, the milk strike has national implications enough to call for Mr. Ching's attention. It affects consumers in two States as well as the District of Columbia, and it affects producers in a wider area. The same basic question is being debated in other cities—whether, if dairies grant the union demand for six days' pay with a five-day work week, they can shut down plant operations on Sundays. The companies contend that this is the only way a wage increase can be made without an increase in prices.

The union, however, argues that such closing would cut into drivers' commissions. Deliveries are now on an every-other-day basis, and once in every two weeks they fall on Sunday. If Sunday plant closings were mandatory, deliveries would be regularized on Monday, Wednesday and Friday or Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. In either case there would be one fewer delivery every two weeks, and consumers would have no delivery over the weekend. The union fears with some justification that this would cause a loss of business by inducing customers to buy at retail stores. Clearly this is a point on which both parties will have to compromise.

Precisely because any local settlement may set a pattern, it is essential that the discussion be refocused on the issues. The union demands, in effect, are Nation-wide. Moreover, two of the local dairies—Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase and Lucerne—have national connections. Inevitably, then, the strike has national implications, and purely local or individual attempts at settlement are discouraged. This is one of the evils of industry-wide bargaining, evils which have become apparent in other instances in which the general public has suffered. But the situation is a fact, and the best protection for the public interest now is for Federal mediators to exert every effort to work out a formula that could provide a national pattern.

Unhappy Attlee

Britain's Labor Party executive committee appears to have made Britain's Labor government look somewhat foolish. It rushed into print with its brusque rejection of the Schuman Plan on the eve of a scheduled Commons statement on the subject by the Prime Minister keeping the door open. The result was something of an anticlimax for the Prime Minister. Mr. Attlee held to his text, departing from it only to say, in answer to bewildered questioners, that party and government were different—a reply that simply added to the bewilderment. A high degree of discipline has hitherto been maintained in the Labor regime, perhaps more so than in any administration in Britain's history.

The revelation of public division in Labor ranks is bound to make the government seem guilty of a slight case of perfidy in its affirmative stand on the object of the Schuman Plan, namely, European integration. For some time this has been pretty generally suspected in continental Europe and America, and foreign critics of British policy will welcome the straightforwardness of the party pronouncement, for it serves, at any rate, to clear the air. But while it will do this abroad, it will create confusion at home—in the Labor Party, as it has, indeed, throughout Britain. This, of course, may have been the intent of the promoters of the broadside, and the suspicion is fortified by the identification of the committee chairman, Dr. Hugh Dalton.

Dr. Dalton was formerly Chancellor of the Exchequer, but resigned in the last Parliament when a leak about a budget of his appeared in one of the newspapers. After the recent election he was brought back into the government in the lesser post of Minister of Town and Country Planning, a post which in a strictly planned society would be all-important, but which in present circumstances is something less than significant. Dr. Dalton is the intellectual leader of the economic planners in the Labor Party who look to the time when planning will be thorough enough to make over society. Among his other talents he is an artful dodger in politics, and, if his maneuver was aimed at precipitating a crisis over the control of the Labor Party, he may have succeeded. Certainly this is the kind of political sortie that Mr. Attlee cannot ignore.

Bomb Program

The Atomic Energy Commission, which is now expending public funds at the rate of about three quarters of a billion dollars annually, is reportedly ready to ask Congress for authorization to contract for the spending of "some hundreds of millions" in addition on an enlarged hydrogen and atom bomb program. In what frame of reference and by what standards will the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy judge the request? Even this exalted watchdog of Congress probably lacks the essential information requisite to a sound decision. And, of course, it cannot pass on to Congress as a whole such information as it may be granted. Nor can the public have any basis whatever for approving or disapproving the program which Congress authorizes.

Thus the American people have almost ceased to be self-governing in an area likely to shape their entire future. There are eminent experts—for example, Dr. Robert Bacher, until recently a member of the Atomic Energy Commission—who think that the time, skill, energy and resources required to perfect hydrogen bombs could be better expended in the production of other weapons. The AEC is said to have sought White House approval for the relaxation of information controls about the hydrogen project, at least in connection with its request to Congress for funds. We hope very heartily that the approval will be granted. Unless a great deal more about the project is made known, there is no way to tell whether it will imperil or promote security.

We have come to a stage in the development of atomic energy when secrecy may be a dangerous fetish. It hampers the productivity of scientists. It heightens public anxiety. It aggravates the international deadlock. There is no longer an American monopoly in respect of the basic scientific knowledge about atomic energy. Continued concealment of what appears to have become an "open secret" may boomerang disastrously. The letter written the other day to the United Nations by Prof. Niels Bohr, the great Danish scientist who participated in production of the first atomic bomb, is not to be dismissed as impractical idealism. Agreement between nations, he observed, "presupposes free access to all information." He pleaded for the removal of obstacles to free mutual interchange of scientific knowledge. "The very fact that knowledge is in itself the basis for civilization points directly," he said, "to openness as the way to overcome the present crisis." It is civilization itself that is now at stake.

On Perjury

In the State of Washington not so long ago, an informer, rather than his victim, was indicted for perjury. This happened when the Canwell Committee of the Washington State Legislature, a miniature imitation of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, was investigating communism on the campus of the University of Washington. The committee produced a witness, one George Hewitt—a former Communist, of course—who testified under oath that he, personally, had given instruction in the principles of communism to Prof. Melvin Rader of the university's English department at a Communist school in New York State in the summer of 1938.

Well, Professor Rader, with some help from a reporter for the Seattle Times, Ed Guthman, who was awarded a Pulitzer prize this year for his stories on the case, produced documentary proof from the records of the University of Washington that he had taught at its summer session until July 20, 1938, and from the records of a summer resort in Washington that he had spent the entire month of August there with his wife. The attorney general of Washington investigated the case and reported that the only reasonable conclusion that could be reached was that George Hewitt had lied. Accordingly, in what must be a unique instance of its kind, Hewitt was indicted for perjury.

Self-Incrimination

The refusal of Philip J. Jaffe, editor of the defunct magazine Amerasia, to testify before the Tydings subcommittee cannot escape relation to the fact that in New York a grand jury was also looking into the theft of hundreds of confidential documents found in the Amerasia office in 1945. Jaffe paid a fine of $2500 on a charge of unlawful possession of Government documents as the result of the 1945 raids on the Amerasia office. But this does not prevent the Government from prosecuting him on more serious charges if it has lawfully obtained evidence which it thinks would stand up in court. For this reason the attempt to examine Jaffe before a congressional committee was grossly ill-timed to say the least. So would be any other inquiry such as 21 Senators propose, while court proceedings are going on.

If, however, the Government has no intention of bringing new charges against the witness, means certainly ought to be at hand to require him to reply to the committee's questions. As the Supreme Court said recently in the Bryan case:

> . . . persons summoned as witnesses by competent authority have certain minimum duties and obligations which are necessary concessions to the public interest in the orderly operation of legislative and judicial machinery . . . When we come to examine the various claims of exemption, we start with the primary assumption that there is a general duty to give what testimony one is capable of giving, and that any exemptions which may exist are distinctly exceptional, being so many derogations from a positive general rule.

The chief refuge of unwilling witnesses these days is the constitutional safeguard against compelling anyone to give self-incriminating testimony. There can be no doubt that many reluctant witnesses are hiding behind this provision of the law regardless of whether their testimony would in fact incriminate them. Many years ago Congress gave any witness summoned before it complete immunity from prosecution "for any fact or act touching which he shall be required to testify." But the statute was subsequently modified to leave only partial protection, and the Supreme Court has held that the present law is not "a sufficient substitute for the constitutional privilege of refusing to answer self-incriminating questions."

Obviously the whole problem needs congressional attention. The committees of Congress ought to be in a position to decide whether it is more important to hear a person's sworn testimony on any given set of facts or to reserve the right of prosecuting him for any crime that might be disclosed. The extensive use of the self-incrimination plea will probably compel Congress to reexamine the law if it wishes to retain its investigative powers free from serious impairment.

Peet's Powder

Let us consider the curious case of Mr. John Peet, chief correspondent at Berlin for Reuter's news agency. Mr. Peet had a good job and an interesting one and enjoyed the good opinion of his editors and his colleagues. Suddenly Mr. Peet decided that he was nothing better than a "tool of the American war machine," and departed for the Russian sector and the propaganda headquarters of Comrade Gerhart Eisler. There, facing a Communist newsreel camera, he read a long statement in German, spouting the current party line about the sinister purposes contained in the Schuman Plan. When he had finished he went to a telephone, called the Reuter's office in London and repeated his speech in English.

Mr. Peet said that he had come to his decision as the result of the "lying accounts" sent out to the Western press about the recent Whitsuntide demonstration by the Communist youth of Germany. Mr. Peet, apparently, neglected to say in what particulars these accounts were false or inaccurate. The general purport of them, as we remember, was that the demonstration, which many had feared might be the signal for a putsch into the Western sector, had been something of an anticlimax, due among other things, to the heavy rain that seemed to have washed out whatever ardor had been pumped into the young demonstrators. All this appeared to have been visually confirmed by the newsreel movies of the affair. Of course the newsreels, like the news stories, may have been doctored for the occasion; but the Communist newsreel for which Mr. Peet has posed is open to the same suspicion.

Some may find a sufficient explanation for Mr. Peet's conduct in the fact that he is a veteran of the International Brigade of the Spanish Civil War. Not all the members of that organization, of course, were Communists, but among the survivors of it the Communists for some reason appear to be very much of a majority. Another theory, advanced at British military headquarters, is that Peet is a "very sick man," with the rather strong implication that he is off his chump.

Neither explanation seems to us really satisfactory. If Mr. Peet is really balmy, then it seems to us that his is a highly unoriginal form of madness. If he is a disciplined Communist, then it is a fair presumption that he acted not of his own initiative but under party orders. In that case we must strive to discover the purpose of such orders. One possibility might be that it was a mere propaganda stroke designed to recoup some of the "face" lost through the Whitsuntide fiasco. If so, it hardly squares with Comrade Eisler's reputation for ingenuity in these matters; for it would seem off-hand that Mr. Peet's value to the party was infinitely greater in the job he possessed than any he is likely to find behind the Iron Curtain.

Sense On Rents

Extension of rent control by both houses of Congress will not undermine the argument that the case for immediate abolition was very strong. Assuredly the adjustment cannot be much longer delayed, for in many areas of the country it could be made now without much hardship. However, the housing supply is not yet equalized, and in some localities the sudden removal of ceilings on June 30 would have put an unconscionable squeeze on low-income tenants. The continuation of controls, with the clear implication that this is the last extension, will afford a little more time for the price of new housing, particularly apartments, to come down within reason.

We think Congress took a wise course in continuing blanket controls only until the beginning of the year and leaving the further retention of controls until next June in the hands of States and local communities which are best equipped to judge their own situations. Of the two congressional bills, the House version, continuing blanket Federal controls until February 1, seems to us the better. Many State Legislatures will meet in January, and the Judd amendment providing an extra month of grace will give them time to act if they wish to do so. We hope that conferees will adopt this version. We also hope that members of the Senate will be able to dissuade Senator Cain from a renewal of his filibuster when the conference report is considered. For him to indulge in a further hold-up, after Congress has made its basic decision to prolong controls, would merely be to waste pointlessly time which the Senate cannot spare.

"Sour Milk"

Congratulations upon your excellent editorial of June 13, "Sour Milk." You expressed thoughts that must have occurred to most of the District citizens, certainly to all those who were suddenly left without milk to give their children. This really brought home to me the plight of District residents who have no one upon whom to rely to express their will in a situation of this kind.

As your editorial pointed out, the governing officials of the District were both slow to act and, in acting, gave little thought to the problems of the individual residents needing milk. Also, from news reports, it seems they are pretty much unapproachable as far as the individual resident and his needs are concerned.

Neither union nor management has bothered to worry about their individual customers, except perhaps as pawns in the strike. Obviously, no fear of public reaction concerned them. In the District the public has no effective instrument of intervention to protect its rights—or its children.

Union and management put forth logical and somewhat smug reasons for their actions and both disclaim responsibility for stranding the children of the community. But the union is certainly to blame for the sloppy manner in which the strike was called, and for not anticipating the resultant dairy action. The dairies, on the other hand, had no business moving so quickly in group action heedless of and directly contrary to the interests of the public which supports them. Both parties will undoubtedly protest innocence, but the record is established and it shows a blatant disregard for the public on the part of both.

Your editorial, therefore, was most welcome. At least the public of Washington has a voice. Let us hope Congress will show that it also has an effective champion as well as guardian.

Whatever the merits for and against the milk strike this stoppage must go down in history as the cruelest blow inflicted by one class of the community upon another least able to defend itself. The people affected are all the weakest strata—the children, the babies, the mothers and the sick. No doubt in due course the price will have to be paid by the public who are helpless spectators at pressure groups warring with each other. It is not the fault of the public—they are merely the victims.

"Fetish Of Freedom"

An eminent and cultured friend once assured me without cracking a smile that the Middle Ages were the most productive period in the history of mankind. His doctrinal forebears undoubtedly had much in common with those of the no less distinguished gentleman whose attack on the "fetish of academic freedom" was quoted recently in your June 13 issue.

The "armor-plated limitation" which the learned gentleman would set upon the acquisition and dissemination of knowledge apparently constitutes a new kind of rack to persuade modern Galileos that the earth is flat.

The maintenance and the defense of the "American way of life" are best served by the continuance of the free institutions on which that life is based and not by bigoted and intolerant attitudes that are just as alien here as the ideology they pretend to combat.

Juvenile Court

Hats off to Miss Clary and Miss Fagrie, who had the courage of their convictions to resign from their posts.

The Juvenile Court cannot be compared to other courts that follow traditional procedures for punishing criminals and minor offenders. Instead, through a long and unique history it has evolved to its present day function of rehabilitating juvenile delinquents. It is, therefore, very important to have a judge on the bench who is sympathetic to the concept of rehabilitation. If the judge does not conform to this philosophy, then the basic mission of the Juvenile Court has failed.

By resigning their posts Miss Clary and Miss Fagrie have indicated that they cannot work in an atmosphere contrary to primary social work concepts. It is only by such courageous acts that the public can become aware that we must progress and not retrogress in the Juvenile Court of Washington.

"Divorce Needed"

First, let me express my appreciation to you, or to the appropriate member of your staff, for the carefully reasoned statement in the May 29 editorial "Divorce Needed." The reasoning followed was essentially the same as that which led the Joint Committee of the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities and the Department of Agriculture to recommend action to sever any formal operating relationships between the Extension Service and any private farm organization in the various States in which such relationship exists.

One sentence in the editorial needs further comment, since it has been the subject of considerable space in your news columns, and of subsequent comment. That is the statement that "Testimony has developed that in some areas county agents serve exclusive 'rings' of farmers."

The impression of the balanced farming program which grew out of questions asked at the recent hearings on Mr. Granger's bill to prohibit exclusive sponsoring arrangements between the Extension Service and a private farm organization in any State, is considerably different from the program as it is, and the necessarily crowded time schedule of the hearings apparently did not permit a public opportunity to tell what the program is and does.

In the first place, it has no real relationship to the subject of the hearings, but was brought into them through a commendatory reference by Representative Christopher of Missouri. Mr. Christopher used the term "ring" to describe it and this term, which has a sinister sound in Washington, was of course seized upon by reporters, as I would have done when I was a reporter. The term as used in Missouri derives, however, from the "threshing rings" in which farmers cooperated (before the days of the combine-harvester) in exchanging help, rather than from any political organization in Missouri or elsewhere.

The balanced farming program in Missouri (since adopted in some other States) is essentially a demonstration of the value of the availability of competent help to the farmer in planning and carrying out his entire farm operation. As I understand it a number of farmers (say 50) in a given county or area agree to pay a certain sum (say $50) toward the employment of a special assistant county agent. The farms must be so located over the area as to provide a demonstration to the farmers in that area.

Since the sum paid by the farmers is not enough for the full salary of the man employed, sufficient additional public funds are supplied. This county agent works with the farmers participating in the program, helps them plan the best use of their land and the best and most profitable type of farming operation, and helps them carry out the plan. There is a limitation of the period (two years, I believe) under which any farmer can participate, so that a rotation of services among those wishing to participate is provided.

It is correct, I suppose, that this does involve special service to individuals with the use of some public funds. The time limit on such services, the educational value of the program, and the fact that this is a relatively economical method (from the standpoint of the public treasury) for accomplishing a desired purpose are, I believe, advanced in its justification. I am told that many farmers visit these "demonstration farms" in the course of a year, and that their education value and influence is substantial.

I do not presume to know what the soundest public policy is in such matters, but do submit that (a) the program as it operates is considerably different from the impression given and (b) that there may well be room for experiment as to different methods of achieving a desirable public end.

Enemies Within

Since you lately have shown so great an interest in classical quotations, would you like to hear from Demosthenes' Chersonesean Discourse? The last patriot of Athens had this to say:

"As soon as the question of Philip is brought up somebody rises to talk about how pleasant it is to live in peace, how onerous the support of a great army is. They say that there are people who want to waste our money . . . and so forth, all of which makes you put off everything until later and gives Philip a chance to do quietly all that he wants to do . . . In this way they earn your support and his money.

"How does it happen then that he is able to conduct expeditions openly, to flout the laws, to take cities, while none of these men agree that the war has begun? On the contrary, those who urge you not to let him do these things, not to give up everything, are accused of warmongering. They do it so that you may turn your anger on those who give you good counsel, that you may sit in judgment on them instead of defending yourselves against Philip.

"Those who have sold out to Philip should be despised and should be beaten to death. In fact, you will never conquer your enemies from without if you do not first punish the enemies within."

Don't you agree that these words have become valid again?

Romance—Aid To Good Times

By Malvina Lindsay

Marriage Boom's Fate

BACK OF the nervous speculation over how long the building boom and other phases of present prosperity will continue lies the question: What of the marriage boom? For it has had much to do with the buying of houses, motor cars, household equipment, baby carriages—to say nothing of diamond rings.

Now it is headed downward. But will there be a real bust in romance, as in 1932, a slump, or a leveling off? How will its fluctuations affect business? Here enters the old question of the chicken or the egg. For prosperity promotes marriage—yet marriage promotes prosperity.

The present marriage decline, which began in 1947, will definitely deflate the housing market by 1952, warns the Construction Division of the Department of Commerce. The surplus of wartime waiting eligibles has even now been largely used up. Doubled up families are getting undoubled fast. And population of marriageable age will be relatively small in the middle 1950s because of low marriage and birth rates of the depression.

Furthermore, graphs of the cycle experts show a deep marriage valley around 1952. Edward R. Dewey cites an 18 1/3-year rhythm in marriages. Low points have been in the late 1880s, again just before the First World War, then in 1939. However, all cyclists cautiously point out that all such rhythms are subject to the distortions of war.

SO MUCH for the dark side of the marriage picture. There's also the long-term rise in marriage rates. This has steadily gone up despite temporary setbacks. The country now has fewer single persons proportionately than at any time since marriage statistics have been compiled.

What's more, Americans are marrying and setting up homes at earlier ages than at any time in their past. This means children are being born to younger parents and there's a chance for more of them. Recently a trend to the three- and four-child household has shown up, especially among educated and upper income groups. Also the tendency of divorced persons, as well as widows and widowers, to remarry has picked up in recent years.

True, there were only about 1,580,000 marriages last year, while the peak marriage year of 1946 boasted 2,291,000. Some economic prophets see a drop in family formation to less than 400,000 annually in the latter 1950s. Some don't see much chance for another building boom until around 1965 when today's big crop of children under 5 will reach marriageable age.

But this could come earlier if the young marriage trend grows. The median marriage age for men now is between 23 and 24 years, that for women between 20 and 21. Children born of the marriage pickup in 1937 might be starting families before 1960.

PAUL H. JACOBSON, vital statistics analyst for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., has predicted a resumption of the "historic upward trend in marriage in the 1950s." The Institute of Life Insurance thinks marriage rates in the 1950s may be largely affected by economics.

But cycles of social attitudes also must be considered. Women are now in strong rebound from the career-or-marriage viewpoint. Probably not for 75 years have marriage and children been so openly their avowed goal. Some want careers also—or are willing to take them for the paycheck. The steady entry of married women into the labor market indicates that in any future depression marriage is not so likely to be postponed or put aside until the young man can get ahead.

The trend to live alone also will increase the number of households. Not only young married couples, but the increasing number of older couples or single persons will want places of their own. And rapidly developing is the tendency of young single persons to leave the family roof and establish separate households.

While romance may be bearish in the 1950s, there is no bust in sight comparable to that of 1932. And while the demand for diamond rings, bridal finery, cribs, toys, bungalows may decline, there will yet be legions of adolescents needing bicycles, sweaters, rooms of their own. For the classic plaint of parents is, "The older they get the more they cost."

Training Children

The letter on "Juvenile Court" by A Teacher in your issue of June 7 should be required reading for all college-educated mothers especially, as well as for everyone working with children. Every word of his communication is so true and so needed saying that one hesitates to stress one point more than another. However, I feel that his points, "Parents and teachers must always be on guard against dogmatism and rigidity" and "They do not mean that you should place on an adolescent's shoulders the burden of planning a large part of his life which is an adult responsibility," cannot be emphasized enough.

I wish he had included the part the religious belief (or lack of it) and intention on the part of the people dealing with children can and should play in helping children of today to be normal, happy and healthy boys and girls.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Something To Sell

Lippmann

A NUMBER of apparently separate but converging developments are bringing us, I venture to think, to a new phase in the postwar history of Europe.

I have in mind: (1) the coming peace settlement with Japan which involves the strategic redeployment of American power in the Far East; (2) the new military technology announced from the Pentagon which—if it is applied—alters radically the military situation not only on the western but also on the eastern side of the Iron Curtain; (3) the economic improvement and the French offer to Germany.

SINCE a peace settlement with Japan involves the withdrawal of American forces, the restoration of Japanese sovereignty, including the right to arm in self-defense and for internal security, and a foreign policy of neutralization in the sense of no military alliances, the question naturally arises what bearing, if any, all this has on a German peace treaty. I believe that developments of this sort in Japan will have great repercussions in Germany and in Europe—both subjectively and objectively.

The spectacle of the United States preparing to withdraw its forces and to liberate Japan will raise the question of when the occupation of Germany, which causes the military partition of Europe, is to end. This is the supreme European question. It is the crux of the problem of "peace". If the occupation of Japan can end, then men will be sure to ask why the occupation of Europe should not end also.

IN A preceding article I discussed the fact that an American military withdrawal from Japan will relieve us of the heavy and difficult commitment to feed and to defend Japan in case of war. I think that there is weighty and responsible opinion to support the conclusion that even on the narrowest ground of military strategy, a peace treaty which restores the independence of Japan is an American interest.

But that does not alter the fact that an American military withdrawal from Japan is also a decided military advantage to the Soviet Union. It increases the security of Soviet Siberia quite considerably.

WE MUST, therefore, not overlook the idea of making the Soviet Union buy the military withdrawal which we are prepared to sell. Stalin will understand this diplomatic technic; he practiced it at Yalta when we bought his participation in the Pacific war with the recognition of his political claims. Now today, though we cannot bluff and pretend as he did, though we cannot disguise the fact that in the end we know we have to leave Japan, still the American withdrawal from Japan is a strong card in our hand, if it is played shrewdly in the European game. Therefore the Russians should be invited—through diplomatic channels—to begin putting in their bids.

One of the ways to play the Japanese card in Europe is to make the Japanese peace treaty a model of how to restore sovereignty and national self-respect, and of how to put an end to an occupation. Then, holding that treaty aloft like a flag, we should ask the Russians to join us in treating the Germans as well as we are treating the Japanese. That would make us, as we should always have been, the champions of German unity and of German independence. The Russian occupation of eastern Germany would become increasingly difficult and unprofitable, for we should have aroused against it the national interest of the Germans.

THIS HAS long been the right political policy and the State Department, which got around this year to realizing the importance of German unity, will come around in its lumbering bureaucratic way to the idea of German national independence.

But now, with the military development that the Pentagon is talking about, a policy of national independence, and of no more occupation in Europe, can be given a military foundation. Insofar as these new weapons improve the chances of local defense, they will promote the spirit of national and of European independence. It will not be necessary for every country to make itself the military satellite of one or the other of the giant powers. The new military technology should and, I believe, will restore the importance of the middle powers, and of groups of small powers allied for their own defense, and of that European union which is trying to be born.

The spirit of independence is bound to turn against all forms of military occupation and to work against all forms of military satellitism. That spirit is our best, our strongest, our most inexhaustible, and our least expensive weapon. We must not allow bureaucratic woodenheadedness nor the vested interests which are the barnacles of every military occupation to prevent us from using it.

A Communication

O'Mahoney Defends His 'Competition' Bill

By Joseph C. O'Mahoney

Senator from Wyoming

THEY CALL my bill, S. 1008, the "basing point bill," thus giving a good dog a bad name. Everybody knows what happens to a good dog when a sufficient number of people in any community give credence to the bad name. It should not happen to this dog for S. 1008 is a good bill which will be good for business and good for competition and will not weaken the antitrust laws.

Marquis Childs, in his column in The Washington Post of June 13, says:

"The measure, passed by the Senate by a vote of 43 to 27, permits manufacturers to fix a base price that includes the freight charges from a given point, usually the city in which the major part of the industry is concentrated. Thus, all buyers must pay the same price whether they are 2000 miles away or right next door to the factory."

If the bill did that I would be opposed to it because it would then legalize price fixing by re-establishing the outlawed Pittsburgh-plus system. Frankly, it is impossible for me to understand how any person who has read the bill can draw such a conclusion. This is what the bill says:

"It shall not be an unfair method of competition or an unfair or deceptive act or practice for a seller, acting independently, to quote or sell at delivered prices or to absorb freight."

THIS LANGUAGE is merely a restatement of what has been testified by the Federal Trade Commission. Observe the words "acting independently." How can a seller, acting independently, participate in an industry-wide agreement, express or implied, that would select "the city in which the major part of the industry is concentrated" and fix identical prices with all competitors on that basis? To me independent action means independent action, but in order that there might be no doubt whatsoever on this point it was written into my bill, following the sentence above quoted, the following proviso:

"Provided, That this shall not make lawful any combination, conspiracy, or collusive agreement; or any monopolistic, oppressive, deceptive, or fraudulent practice, carried out by or involving the use of delivered prices or freight absorption."

This language cannot be misunderstood by any person who is willing to give simple words their plain meaning. It says that neither of these pricing practices can be even involved in any combination, conspiracy or collusive agreement. Surely that outlaws any such understanding as well as any such written agreement. But the proviso goes further. It says that the practices cannot be involved in any monopolistic, oppressive, deceptive, or fraudulent practice. Thus the individual seller, acting alone, cannot on his own behalf by fraud, by deception, by oppression or monopolistic action use either delivered prices or absorb freight.

THIS SECTION appears in the bill on the President's desk exactly as it was passed by the Senate on June 1, 1949. It was not amended in the House, it was not touched in the conference and the whole contention that this bill legalizes the systematic basing point system arises from fears which have no substance.

Opponents of the bill who were not concerned about the provisions of Section I, above quoted, have opposed it because they alleged that it undermines the Robinson-Patman Act. They are equally mistaken. The Robinson-Patman Act makes it "unlawful for any person engaged in commerce . . . to discriminate in price . . . where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce or to injure, destroy or prevent competition." This provision of the Robinson-Patman Act is not altered in one iota by my bill, for any price discrimination the effect of which may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly will be as firmly forbidden if the President signs this bill as it is now because my bill does not amend the provision of the Robinson-Patman Act which decribes the unlawful act.

It is so carefully drawn that it provides for the protection of delivered pricing only when its effect is not that prohibited by the Robinson-Patman Act. Likewise with respect to freight absorption, it provides that this practice is protected only where its effect is such that it would not be prohibited by the Robinson-Patman Act.

THERE IS, however, another attack upon the bill which is made by those who do not want too much competition in the retail field. They would prefer a system of price freezing rather than price competition and they say that a seller who, in good faith, reduces a price to meet the price of a competitor, should by that fact alone be required to prove his innocence even though the Government was unable to show that the effect of the reduction might be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly.

Either we are for competition or we are against it. I am for competition. I believe that the consumer is entitled to consideration and it seems to be to be utterly fantastic that people who believe themselves to be foes of monopoly should, in one breath, condemn this bill on the baseless charge that in Section 1 it would permit price fixing and then condemn it on the charge that in Section 3 it would not permit price fixing on the retail level.

I say here, as I said upon the Senate floor, that this bill is good for business and good for small business, that it preserves competition by eliminating confusion as to the meaning of the law, that it does not undermine the antitrust laws. It does not legalize the basing point system. It does not undermine the Robinson-Patman Act. Government owes a responsibility to the commerce which it must regulate in the public interest to protect competition by making the law clear.

Citizens' Commission

By Marquis Childs

Antidotes For McCarthyism

YOU HEAR the question frequently asked in Washington: When will McCarthyism end? It is asked by those who feel, along with Senator Margaret Chase Smith, that the technique of smear and countersmear is doing infinite harm to the political and moral life of the Nation.

Childs

It is being asked by politicians up for re-election in the fall. Some are fearful that it will be used to defeat them while others are hopeful that the McCarthy charges will be a weapon on their side.

It is being asked, above all, in the State Department where thousands of hours of effort have gone into refuting the attack with proper documentation. The whole episode has handicapped the work of the department in every respect.

The idea of a commission of citizens of integrity and stature who would review the whole security policy of the department in relation to the charges was approved by the White House. Inspired stories disclosed that 10 days ago.

Since then the difficulty has been in persuading the top-ranking citizens to take on this inevitably exacting and most probably unpleasant and thankless chore. At least two tentative acceptances have been obtained. One is that of Chief Justice John Patrick Higgins of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts. Chief Justice Higgins is active in the Roman Catholic Church.

The other tentative acceptance was wrung from Charles E. Wilson, head of the General Electric Corp. Mr. Wilson has several times proved his willingness to take a tough job in the public interest and to give of his time earnestly and conscientiously.

UNFORTUNATELY, a third citizen approached had reluctantly to say no. The third citizen was Charles P. Taft, brother of Senator Robert A. Taft. Like Wilson, Taft has again and again served the public interest with no prospect of reward other than a sense of duty done.

But in this instance, it is reported, Taft replied that because of his position as a member of the Cincinnati (Ohio) City Council he could not accept a temporary assignment likely to take him to Washington for a considerable period. This decision caused keen disappointment among those trying to shape up a commission that will win acceptance with public opinion. While Charles Taft's views have frequently differed from those of Robert's he is a lifelong Republican who has taken an active part in reforming the politics of his home town.

Presumably such a nonpartisan and nonpolitical commission would have access to the security files that the President has denied to Senators on both sides of the bitter dispute over the State Department policy and security. After a thorough and impartial study of the controversy and all the records the commission would make its report. This report would then be taken as the final word by the Administration and its recommendations would be carried out regardless of the consequences.

SECRETARY of State Dean Acheson, is not, however, waiting on the success or failure of this approach. Beginning with his speech in Dallas, Tex., he is starting out on a campaign to win friends and influence people.

The Secretary will speak to the Governors of the States at their conference at White Sulphur Springs on June 20. A brief part of this talk is to be on the record, and then Acheson will speak off the record, and really go to town on the problems of policy making in a period such as ours. Two days later he makes an important speech at Harvard University which was the setting for the address by his predecessor, Gen. George C. Marshall, projecting the concept of the Marshall Plan. On June 29 Acheson talks before the national convention of the American Newspaper Guild in Washington, and on July 18 before the international convention of the Lions' Service Clubs in Chicago.

This is a course long urged on the Secretary to whom eloquence and persuasion do not come naturally. He has held to the view that if a man did his duty thoroughly and conscientiously, he would inevitably win public acceptance. The Dallas speech showed a recognition of the need to answer the hopes and fears of people everywhere—those people who have had a growing sense of a world constricting in narrower and narrower circles toward an inevitable doom.

Amended Hatch Bill to Come Up In Senate Today

Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), has scheduled Senate action for today on the conference report on a bill amending the Hatch Act.

Senate approval would send the Hatch Act amendment to the White House. The compromise bill, which has cleared the House, would let the Civil Service Commission impose penalties less than dismissal for violations of the act.

Another section is designed to let Government employes take part in local politics on a party basis in the Maryland and Virginia communities near Washington.

House Group Votes Income Tax for Amateur Authors

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday voted to make non-professional authors, such as Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, subject to income taxes on future returns from their writings.

In another action, the committee voted to outlaw the so-called "collapsible corporation," a device by which some motion picture producers have avoided payment of personal income taxes.

When Eisenhower wrote his best-selling memoirs "Crusade in Europe," the Treasury ruled that under the law he had to pay only the capital gains tax of 25 percent on the sale of the copyright. As a non-professional, he was considered to be selling an asset—the right to his life story.

When a professional writer turns out a book, however, his returns are considered to be earnings subject to income taxes, which in many cases run much higher than 25 percent.

The President's Calling List

President Truman yesterday had the following White House appointments:

11:00 a. m. Representative Huber (D., Ohio) and others.

12:00 noon Air Force Marshal Lord Tedder.

12:15 p. m. Senator Young (R., N. D.), Representative Hagen (R., Minn.) and others.

12:30 p. m. Democratic National Chairman William M. Boyle.

3:45 p. m. Army Secretary Frank Page and Assistant Secretary Earl D. Johnson.

4:15 p. m. Secretary of Commerce Sawyer.

present, so action was deferred.

In a lengthy letter to the committee the two Democratic Senators said Hutchinson is not qualified for the job and was chosen for purely political reasons. He is a leader of the anti-Byrd faction of Virginia Democrats.

President Truman's nomination of Hutchinson to a top-flight federal job, which runs until September, 1953, is regarded as an open slap at Byrd for his anti-Truman activities. It is widely interpreted as a move to build up an anti-Byrd, pro-Truman organization in Virginia.

Byrd is one of the President's toughest political opponents. He was the pivotal figure last year in blocking Mr. Truman's appointment of his close friend, former Senator Mon C. Wallgren (D., Wash.) as chairman of the National Security Resources Board. Wallgren later was confirmed to a seven-year term on the Federal Power Commission.

In recent months, Byrd has made a number of speeches charging that Mr. Truman's policies will lead the Nation into socialism.

The two Senators told the committee that they had been "reliably informed upon good authority" that the proposal to send Hutchinson's name to the Senate emanated from the chairman of the Democratic National Committee, William M. Boyle, Jr.

"In our opinion," the two Senators said in their 3000-word letter, "Mr. Hutchinson's nomination is political and made for a definite and obvious political purpose. This opinion was expressed by nearly every newspaper in Virginia that made comment when the nomination was first announced. But we do not advance tha tfact as representing our valid objection to this nomination.

"Membership on the Federal Trade Commission is a quasi-judicial and quasi-legislative position of high importance to the economic life of the Nation. Mr. Hutchinson has virtually no experience with the broad over-all problems confronting our economic system. He lacks judicial temperament and exhibits a blind support of public policies merely because such are advocated by certain party leaders.

"We have known Mr. Hutchinson for 30 years. We do not believe he posseses the training, experience or competency to perform the extremely vital functions and tremendous responsibilities devolving upon him should his nomination be confirmed.

"Neither of the Virginia Senators was consulted with respect to this nomination."

In his testimony, Hutchinson recalled that before his open split with the Byrd organization, Byrd as Governor of Virginia, once appointed him to the post of Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Chairman Ed Johnson (D., Colo.) brought out a second letter from Byrd explaining that at the time Hutchinson got the post, the job was about to be abolished under a reorganization plan. Hutchinson, Byrd said, got the State job only on this temporary basis because he was working at the time for the incumbent who died.

Hutchinson told the committee:

"This appointment may be political, but, what in the realm of Government, doesn't have a political tinge?"

"I repeat," he said, "that I did not discus this appointment with Mr. Boyle."

He pledged that if confirmed by the Senate for the FTC membership, he would discharge his duties "without any political considerations whatsoever."

He said he held no animosity toward Byrd and Robertson, nor, he said, did he feel that his appointment was "purely political."

"I have nothing to hide," Hutchinson concluded. "I have little ambition left in life. But I do want to leave behind me a record of which my daughter and grandchildren need not be ashamed."

GOP Sets Goal On Adjourning

law, already slated by Lucas. Wherry said he was talking only about major bills, and non-controversial minor measures could be quickly passed.

Taft was asked if the Hawaii and Alaska Statehood bills would be shelved by the skeleton schedule.

"I don't want to get into details," said Taft.

Biggest single question mark on adjournment has been the House-passed "single package" appropriation bill, still tied up in the Senate committee.

Assuming the big bill can be reported to the Senate shortly after July 4, Taft and Wherry said they felt it could clear the Senate and a House-Senate Conference Committee in the remaining month.

The tax bill, the next highest hurdle, has been tied up in the House Ways and Means Committee since early February. With excise reductions far outrunning new revenue requested by the President, Democratic leaders still have their fingers crossed on what to do about it.

House leaders have predicted that body will pass a tax bill in some form. President Truman, however, has indicated he will veto any bill that fails to balance tax cuts with new revenue. Lucas has delayed a decision pending a look at the House bill.

In making Senate excise tax action a GOP must, the Senate Republican policy makers reminded Lucas and Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) of their "pledge" early in the session to give the Senate a chance to vote on some cuts.

Taft said he was willing to consider the problem of plugging tax loopholes and raising new revenue if the House gets a bill to the Senate in time.

Philippines Press Filled With Charges Of Corruption in Islands Government

This is the fourth in a special series of articles on the situation in the Philippines by a veteran correspondent and writer on Far Eastern affairs.

By Harold R. Isaacs

Manila, June 14—If only 10 percent of what is alleged about corruption in government in the Philippines were true, the place would still be a political cesspool.

It is almost impossible to stand on a Manila street corner without being hit by some of the flying charges and counter-charges. A bewildering array of investigations is constantly going on or theatening to go on, but they have a way of oozing away amid confusion while new charges pile up.

It is a not unencouraging fact that much worse has been said on this subject in the Philippines press than in any of the "exposes" in the press abroad. There is a clamor on the subject in Manila. It is a clamor that reflects the profound disgust of great masses of people. It has in it the instinctive recognition of politicians that things have gone too far and that they might throw the baby out with the bath if they don't watch out.

Some of the more celebrated current cases have to do with such things as an overpayment of 1,500,000 pesos on a land purchase deal, the regular sale of immigration quotas, the particularly noisome disposal of American army surplus (original value one billion dollars, write-off value 100 million dollars, estimated final receipt by the government 40 million dollars), and an almost endless series of others constantly turning up in the public prints. Even the best-meaning people, in the administration and in Congress, who are trying to do something about it are forced to look much like the traditional comic plumber surrounded by spouting pipes.

Low-Level Graft

But perhaps worse than the well-reported spectacular cases are the substantial accounts you hear of systematic low-level graft that is sucking the country dry.

Low-paid officials are increasingly expecting gratuities for the most minor services.

Along the roads the constabulary and special police maintain "check points" ostensibly to watch for Huks, but use them to levy revenues on all passing commerce. I was told, although I could not check it, that this practice was suspended on the Manila-Baguio road only for the duration of the recent inter-Asian conference at Baguio.

Another less generally reported but galling depredation is the tax of 5 percent of the crop levied in certain provinces for the support of the special civilian police. These police are nominally supposed to provide protection against the Huks, but they apparently operate generally as the goons and plug-uglies of the local political bosses. They are also useful at election time in seeing to it that the correct results are produced.

Filipinos tell you, deprecatingly, that there has always been some corruption, but that years ago, in the late President Quezon's time, it was less blatant, less directly squeezed from the people, and certainly reported less blatantly in the press.

A year ago, when President Quirino and the Senate president and party boss, Jose Avelino, had their spectacular falling out, Quirino spread some of Avelino's defalcations on the record and had him kicked out of the Senate.

Avelino turned up on Quirino the expenditure of some fancy items out of presidential funds, including a famous $2500 bed. A characteristic remark made to me in Manila at the time was: "Avelino's no good, but at least he made his money off the Chinese. That — Quirino is taking it from us!"

Avelino, it might be added, ran against Quirino for President after he'd been dismissed from the Senate, lost, and after his defeat was sent to the United States as a goodwill ambassador. He is there now.

Actually, little of the smear has stuck directly to President Quirino. An attempt was made to impeach him last year over the bed and other assorted items, but his majority held and the attempt failed. Most of Quirino's bitterest critics say he is not personally dishonest but unable to go after the malefactors who surround him.

Quirino became President by the accident of Manuel Roxas' death two years ago. His best friends say defensively that he is weak, or slow to act, or suspicious of disloyalty around him. He is credited with the misfortune of being both stubborn and indecisive, unwilling to listen to criticism, to see any virtue in those who attack him, or any evil in those who support him. He also has a lot of political debts to pay to those who, by rather strenuous and not always legal efforts, returned him to office last November.

Scandals Continue

In an interview with this writer, President Quirino insisted testily that he was striving might and main to cope with scandals bequeathed to him by past administrations.

"If there is so much talk of corruption now," he said, "it is because I have unearthed it, because I am investigating it, because I am trying to do something about it."

There is truth in this, from Quirino's point of view. He certainly inherited some whoppers. But there also seems no lack of new cases cropping up to bedevil him every day. He is surrounded by a family, both personal and official, which does not allow him to give much play to his virtuous impulses. His brother, Antonio, has figured in some of the most damaging charges but remains unscathed.

At a breakfast interview at Malacanan, President Quirino told me he had repeatedly told his cabinet officers to have no dealings with his brother and that he himself had cut off all relations with him.

In a long defense of his regime, delivered with every accent of sincerity, Quirino manages to give the impression of a man who quite sincerely believes things are as he sees them.

"There is no misgovernment," he insists, adding that all his critics are motivated "simply by jealousy." In his efforts to deal with acts of corruption, he seems like a man who drives his fist into a pulpy mass, only to have it close in again as he withdraws his arm.

Quirino has been under heavy fire, not only from the Nacionalista opposition, but from members of his own party in both houses of Congress. He has been promising renovation of his cabinet, although he seems slow to make needed changes. He has just appointed an "Integrity Board" and offered the chairmanship to Vice President Fernando Lopez, who has been openly criticizing the President for incompetence. But the board's powers were too restricted to suit Lopez, who refused the post. Since then, with purported authority to act, the board has been set up, but whether it will get far in its Augean job remains to be seen.

Few people in Manila seem to have any faith that it will. In fact, few seem to have much faith left in anything having to do with the government. This is, in some ways, the most dangerous symptom of the sickness afflicting the Philippines. In the moral climate created during and since the war, almost every public act is assumed to be crooked even when, as sometimes still happens, it is perfectly honest. It is what makes the Philippines government seem even more of a sink of corruption than it really is.

Tomorrow: Much resentment for Manila's political straits is leveled at Quirino.

3-Man Board Starts Probe Of Park Fire

Federal Fire Marshal R. D. Trussell and a three-man board yesterday opened an investigation of the fire in old Wave Barracks I on the polo grounds at West Potomac Park.

The blaze was discovered early yesterday, by Benjamin Suls, of U. S. Special Police, and Sergt. Jack Hobbs, of U. S. Park Police. Firemen put out the flames before extensive damage was done.

Trussell said he understood the Census Bureau intends to move into the structure this week despite the fire damage.

Members of the investigating board are Nathan G. Baker, John Dunham and Frank Muller, all of the Public Buildings Administration.

Yesterday afternoon $500 damage was done to furniture in a tractor-trailer which caught fire in the 2000 block of Georgia ave. nw. Driver of the truck, owned by the Melville Storage Co. of Philadelphia was William T. Ellicott, jr., 35, of Clifton Heights, Pa.

PUC Sets Hearing June 22 on Pepco Sliding Scale Plan

The District Public Utilities Commission yesterday announced it will hold a public hearing June 22 to report on the operations of Potomac Electric Power Co. last year under the modified sliding scale plan. The hearing will be held in the District Building board room at 10 a. m.

The PUC adopted the plan two years ago as a means of stabilizing electricity rates. It provided that Pepco was entitled to a 5½ percent rate of return. Any excess would be split, part going to consumers in refunds and part to a company reserve fund as protection against a rate increase in lean years.

A preliminary report submitted by the company last December indicated no refund could be expected for 1949. The company later announced intentions to seek a rate increase.

YOU'RE DOWN TO YOUR LAST "COPPER"

. . . yet they want to put a tariff of $40 a ton on imports!

Right now, this country faces a serious shortage of copper.

Yet, in the face of overwhelming evidence of the nation's desperate need for imported copper, there is danger that a tax of $40 a ton will go on imported copper after June 30, 1950—in the effort to keep out foreign copper and raise prices still further.

This is a matter of concern not only for industry, but for all of us.

Who needs copper? You—the American public. Automobiles take 18%, Buildings 11%. Electric manufactures, utilities, telephone and telegraph and radio uses account for 40%.

Stockpiling for possible war needs on top of high industrial activity has further reduced industrial stocks, created hand-to-mouth buying and higher prices. The figures are in the table.

And if we look at producers' stocks of copper, we find they amount to less than TWO WEEKS' SUPPLY at current rates of consumption by fabricating companies such as ours.

THE OFFICIAL FIGURES...AND THE COPPER TARIFF

	Tons
Actual Consumption by Fabricators*	103,215
Domestic Production Including Scrap	79,622
Actual Industrial Shortage	23,593
Stockpiling	8,823
Total Monthly Shortage	32,416
Copper Fabricators' Stocks January 1, 1948*	423,432
Copper Fabricators' Stocks April 30, 1950*	358,243
Shortage	65,189

*U. S. Copper Association Copper Institute, as published Estimate from Copper Institute Figures

On the same basis as the figures in the table, the "Total Monthly Shortage" for the first four months of 1950 averaged 41,221 tons.

There is only one way to meet our copper shortage—imports.

Congress is considering legislation to extend, for two years, the current suspension of the import tax on copper. This legislation deserves your support, and the support of everyone, because . . . EVERYONE NEEDS COPPER.

This advertisement is sponsored by REVERE COPPER AND BRASS INCORPORATED, 230 Park Ave., New York, because Revere does not want its customers to be compelled to pay an extra $40 a ton on copper imports, which cost, of necessity, would come out of your pocket in the form of increased prices of consumer goods.

Gas Company's New Pfd. Stock Is Near Sellout

By S. Oliver Goodman

An offering of 30,600 shares of Washington Gas Light Co. preferred stock was reported virtually sold out last night.

Common shareholders of the gas company through rights subscribed to 14.7 percent or 4502 shares at $103 a share. The rights expired Tuesday afternoon.

The remaining 26,098 shares of $4.25 preferred were offered to the public at $103 a share plus accrued dividends by a local underwriting group headed by Johnston, Lemon & Co. The public offering was reported meeting an excellent demand with little stock remaining.

Meanwhile, securities of the gas company showed minor or no reaction yesterday to news of an adverse District Court decision on a rate increase. Judge T. Alan Goldsborough ruled that a gas rate increase granted by the Public Utilities Commission last November should be set aside. Company attorneys indicated that the ruling will be appealed in a higher court. At stake is about $750,000 a year.

On the local exchange yesterday, Washington Gas Light common stock showed a bid price of $28.75 as compared with $27.50 Tuesday. The $4.25 preferred was bid $103 and the $4.50 preferred at $107, both unchanged from the previous day.

As reported previously, the gas company will use the more than three-million-dollar proceeds from the new preferred offering to finance main extensions and other added facilities in the rapidly growing suburban areas.

PEPCO SALES: Potomac Electric Power Co. reported May sales of 170,951,842 kilowatt hours, a gain of 7.28 percent over the same 1949 month. The consolidated sales figure for the first five months was 894,767,755 kilowatt hours, an increase of 5.53 percent over the corresponding period last year.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Carl N. Weinstein of Bethesda, Md., is the top producer of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co. for the fifth successive year, the company announced yesterday. Weinstein, a member of the Million-Dollar Club since January, 1948, is associated with the DuFour Agency here . . . Samuel B. Kingham and Howard E. Isham will become assistant comptrollers of the United States Steel Corp. of Delaware on July 1 . . . W. H. Thoresen has been appointed director of overseas operation for Hudson Motor . . . Norman J. Froelich is the new assistant general manager of sales for Pittsburgh Steel Co.

WARNING: The National Retail Dry Goods Association said in a special bulletin: "It looks as though we are getting set for more inflation." The special bulletin to the 7500-member stores of the NRDGA cautioned against the effect of inflationary price increases on store inventories and public reaction against the retailers.

The bulletin continued: "Inflations spring from the acts of Government, but the general public seems never to recognize the fact. If we should get a substantial degree of inflation with consequent increase in prices, the first disposition of the general public would be to believe prices were rising because of the greed of retailers.

"Finally the Congress, in an effort to appease the people, would get around to establishing controls to prevent prices from rising. Thus, having turned loose on the people the forces of inflation, the lawmakers will place the responsibility on business."

NEW PEAK: Common stock of Capital Transit Co. yesterday changed hands at $36 a share, new peak for the year and $12½ up from the 1950 low. Four hundred shares were purchased at $36. Closing bid price yesterday on the Washington Stock Exchange was $35 with $37 asked.

EARNINGS: Western Union reported net income of $863,284 for the four months ended April 30, equal to 70 cents a common share, compared with a deficit of $3,442,050 in the same 1949 period. Other earnings statements:

Torres Bodet Quits as Head Of UNESCO

Florence, Italy, June 14 (AP).—Chief delegates from 59 countries were called today to meet in secret Thursday for action on the abrupt and angry resignation of Mexico's Jaime Torres Bodet as director-general of UNESCO. Their decision may be announced at a following open session.

This course was decided on as a petition was circulated asking Torres Bodet to reconsider and a parallel move began to keep him in office at least temporarily as head of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Two main reasons were given for the Mexican's decision to step out of the $26,800-a-year job.

Disappointment over the approved budget of $8,200,000 for 1950, which he regards as inadequate, and dissatisfaction with a general tendency among UNESCO delegations to shy away from academic pronouncements for peace.

Newspaper Faces Antitrust Suit by U. S.

New Orleans, June 14 (AP).—The New Orleans Times-Picayune and States were accused in a civil antitrust suit today of monopolistic practices injurious to the competing New Orleans Item.

The suit, filed by the Justice Department in U. S. District Court here, is the first civil action ever brought by the Government charging a newspaper with injury to a newspaper competitor.

The Department's suit alleges that beginning about 1933, the Times-Picayune and States "have been engaged in combination and conspiracy to monopolize trade and commerce in newspapers, in dissemination of news and advertising, in supplies and in nationally advertised products in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act."

The antitrust action was filed against the Times-Picayune Publishing Co., publishers of the Times-Picayune and States, and four officers: L. K. Nicholson, president of the company; John F. Tims, jr., vice president and business manager; Aubrey F. Murray, advertising director; and Donald W. Coleman, circulation manager.

Nicholson issued the following statement:

A substantial part of the charges made by the Government are incorrect.

"Those which are true involve practices followed by many newspapers of this country for years and their legality has never heretofore been questioned.

"We are prepared to meet the issues on the trial of this case and are confident that the court will hold we have not violated the Sherman Act."

The Times-Picayune has a weekday morning circulation of 180,584. The States has a daily afternoon circulation of 99,339. And the Sunday Times-Picayune and States has a circulation of 291,409.

The Item is a six-day afternoon daily and Sunday morning paper. It is published by David Stern, III, formerly of Philadelphia, Pa., and Camden, N. J., and has a weekday circulation of 99,658. Publication of the present Sunday Item was begun in March, 1950, and because of its recent issue, no published audited circulation figures are yet available. However, Publisher Stern said the Sunday circulation is "in excess of the daily."

Last Monday the Louisiana State Senate dropped contempt proceedings against Stern and Editor Clayton Fritchey on recommendation of a special committee. The committee was appointed after the Item printed an edltorial in which it referred to the legislators as "trained seals" and "lackeys" of Gov. Earl K. Long.

Peace Effort Fails in Strike At N. Y. World

New York, June 14 (AP).—The New York World-Telegram and Sun, struck by 400 editorial and commercial employes, failed to publish for the second day today.

The CIO American Newspaper Guildsmen quit work at dawn yesterday in support of their demands for higher wages and other contract benefits. In a new effort to settle the dispute, Federal mediators called a second mediation conference for 9 a. m. Friday.

Refusal of the paper's AFL mechanical employes to cross the guild's picket lines prevented publication yesterday and today of the big afternoon daily, a Scripps-Howard newspaper.

Federal mediators stepped into the dispute late yesterday but their efforts were fruitless. Both union and company officials announced later they were prepared for a long strike, possibly lasting from six weeks to two months.

A skeleton staff of non-Guild newsmen showed up for work at the paper's big afternoon plant again today. They prepared copy in the semi-deserted newsroom but no printers, stereotypers or pressmen were available to put the paper "to bed."

Some 250 pickets marched in front of the newspaper plant early today but rain later cut the number to about 100.

The World-Telegram and Sun is one of the country's largest afternoon newspapers with a circulation well over 600,000 daily.

Executive Secretary Lee B. Wood said he believed the newspaper would recapture all its circulation with the eventual end of the walkout. He said a "big promotion plan" probably would be used to regain readers.

The New York Guild, in support of the 400 strikers, placed a 5 percent special assessment on the wages of its 7000 nonstriking members. Financial aid also is scheduled to come from the international union.

Highway Patrolmen Leave Enka Plant

Morristown, Tenn., June 14 (AP).—Tennessee highway patrolmen quit policing the American Enka Corp. plant today on the eve of a Senate Labor Committee inquiry into a CIO strike there.

Tennessee Safety Commissioner Sam K. Neal ordered 72 patrolmen back to their regular stations this afternoon after three days had passed without incident at the strife-ridden rayon plant.

Neal said he had received assurances from leaders of the striking CIO Textile Workers Union that there would be no more of the sporadic violence that has marked the 11-week-old strike.

Nats Swap Weik for Vernon, Whip Browns, 4 to 1

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ST. LOUIS, JUNE 14.—An angry old man named Philip Decatesby Ball, who used to own the Browns, is responsible for this annual June 15 dither among major league clubs trying to beat the trading deadline.

After midnight tomorrow, there can be no deals except for those declasse athletes who are posted on the waiver lists and aren't reckoned as important. No stars can figure in any transactions from then until the season's end, all because the late Mr. Ball got sore at the Yankees 28 years ago.

POVICH

That was during the hot pennant race of 1922 when Ball's Browns and Col. Jake Ruppert's Yankees were fighting it out. Ball was trying to buy Third Baseman Joe Dugan from Connie Mack in June. Mack wouldn't sell. But in mid-July, he succumbed to the Yankees offer of players and cash for Dugan.

The Yanks beat out the Browns for the pennant by a half game, with Dugan's valuable help. It wouldn't happen again, Ball vowed. He went before the major leagues at the winter meeting, jammed through a ruling that no player trades could be made after June 15.

THAT'S WHY the General Manager George Weiss of the Yankees, General Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox, and General Manager Billy Evans of the Tigers, are sitting high by their telephones for the next 24 hours. It's their last chance to make an important deal that might win the pennant.

The Yankees and Red Sox are waiting for the long-distance to flash 'em from St. Louis, where they are tempting the Dewitt brothers with offers of cash for pitchers. The Tigers also would like to latch on to one of the Browns' pitchers, or somebody's first baseman.

Ned Garver and Cliff Fannin, either or both, are the pitchers the Yankees and Red Sox want. They're banking on the Browns perennial need for cash, of which the rich Eastern clubs have quantities, to pave the way for a deal. The Browns always have been eager to do business on a cash basis as the only way they can stay in business, what with their meager home gate receipts.

BOTH THE Red Sox and Yankees are looking with increased apprehension at the Tigers, now leading the league despite the thinness of their reserves. The Yankees have pitching troubles and need at least one more solid starter of the Garver-Fannin type, though their pitching problem is mild compared to that which is besetting the Red Sox.

It's clear now that the Boston club is wasting the greatest collection of down the line hitting power ever assembled on a single team. With a club batting average of .313, with five regulars hitting .340 or more, the Red Sox are are still trailing the Tigers by 5½ games, the Yankees by five. The sore-thumb of their pitching department is sticking out like, well, a sore-thumb.

Over one brief span last week, Boston pitchers were fearfully mauled. The Browns beat 'em 12-7. The Tigers followed with scores of 18-8, 6-2 and 9-6. In four games, Joe McCarthy's men gave up 45 runs which even Boston's own kind of hitting couldn't offset. And Yankee hurlers have been getting bumped of late, too.

THE PRICE on Garver is roughly $200,000, a figure that won't necessarily stop the Red Sox or Yanks who are thinking in pennant terms and bigger profits. Fannin could be bought a bit more cheaply and the top contenders would settle for either one. What will govern, though, is the Browns' present fiscal position.

The top contenders never deal among themselves at this stage of the race, fearful of bolstering each other. Thus it was that the Cleveland Indians, who still think they have a pennant chance, turned down better offers from the Yankees and Tigers to deal off Mickey Vernon to the Nats, who pose no pennant threat.

The late Mr. Ball when he put the no-trade-after-June-15 rule through in 1922, had in mind the good of the game as well as his own peeve at the Yankees. He visioned that there would always be poor clubs that could be raided by the rich ones, and didn't want any pennants decided by somebody's fat checkbook.

Macks Snap Tiger Streak; Chisox Beat Yanks Again

Detroit, June 14 (AP).—Left-hander Lou Brissie turned in a stout-hearted six-hit pitching job today to lead the Philadelphia Athletics to an 8-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers and end a streak of seven losses to the Detroiters, snapping Detroit's five-game win string.

The A's turned in some heavy stickwork against Detroit Starting Pitcher Paul "Dizzy" Trout.

Elmer Valo, who bagged a pair of homers in the series opener between the teams last night, banged out his No. 5 today, while Eddie Joost hit No. 8. Both wallops were off Trout.

Philley's 3-Run Homer Off Page in 9th Does It

Chicago, June 14 (AP).—Joe Page failed for the second straight day as Dave Philley greeted the ace reliever with a three-run homer in the last of the ninth inning to give the Chicago White Sox a 5-2 triumph over the New York Yankees today.

Philley's smash climaxed a great rally in which the White Sox scored four times after two were out and the bases empty.

The victory was the fourth in succession for the hustling Hose, their longest winning streak of the season. The long drive earned Bill Wight the decision over Allie Reynolds.

Reynolds suddenly weakened with just one putout to go and yielded the tying run on a pinch single by Floyd Baker, a pass to Pinchhiter Luke Appling and Chico Carrasquel's one-bagger to right. Page, who yielded the winning run in the ninth inning in last night's Chicago victory over the Yankees, came in for his nineteenth relief job. His third pitch to Philley sailed into the lower left field deck.

Tribe's Three Homers Whip Boston, 7 to 3

Cleveland, June 14 (AP).—Cleveland defeated Boston tonight, 7-3, in a five-home-run game.

Larry Doby, Al Rosen and Lou Boudreau hit four-baggers for the Indians and Vern Stephens and Ted Williams for the Red Sox.

It was the fourth victory for Mike Garcia, who gave up only five hits.

Johnny Pesky had walked before Williams belted his 19th homer of the season in the third.

In that same inning after Dale Mtichell walked, Doby homered and then Al Rosen followed with his 16th homer to put the Tribe ahead 5-3.

7868 Watch Rocca Throw Mr. America

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Mr. America and Antonio Rocca, the two hottest articles in the wrestling business, matched muscles at Griffith Stadium last night and proved only that Washington is a more sophisticated town than New York.

Rocca tossed Mr. America with an airplane spin in 35 minutes.

Despite a tremendous local buildup plus a great reputation for showmanship gained via the coaxial cable, the two hot shots attracted 7868 customers, many below par for them.

Twice in blase New York they almost doubled that. While New Yorkers paid $125,000 for the privilege of watching their two shows, Washingtonians shoved only $14,250 through the windows.

With $10,000 supposedly going to the two stars, Promoter Florence Turner is probably wondering if it isn't better to confine her shows to her own arena than risk the big overhead that a Griffith Stadium production entails what with paying $10,000 to Rocca and Mr. America plus preliminary wrestlers, ball park rent and other costly incidentals.

Although it was the third meeting of Stanlee and Rocca in big time settings, the boys obviously were not used to having a press row on hand. Announcer Jimmy Lake had to warn them to do their out-of-the ring throwing at the three sides, where the scribes weren't.

In the top supporting bout, Mae Weston threw pretty Helen Hild.

When the girls took over, law and justice took an awful kicking around. Weston, a dirty wrestler if there ever was one, trounced sweet and pretty Helen with a body Slam.

Mae got the biggest laugh of the night when Referee Claudio Villar attempted to break her illegal leg lock around Helen's neck.

"Please kind sir," she said to Villar, "leave go o' me leg or I'll kick your teeth out." Claudio, once a heavyweight boxer, shyly obliged.

After a 30-minute draw between Tony Martinelli and Ivan Kamaroff, the fans got their only sight of blood.

In the two-man team match, Marvin Mercer, introduced as the "lightheavy-weight champion of the world," bloodied Les Ruffins' nose with an errant right and then pinned him. During time out, Referee Villar called for a handler to repair Ruffin. However Ruffin was heard by ringsiders to whisper, "Don't stop the blood, it looks good." So the handler daintily dabbed Ruffin with a piece of kleenex.

Mercer and his partner, Ted Tourdos defeated Ruffin and Kola Kwariani in two straight falls.

Irv Will Return To Outfield Job

Griffs Finally End St. Louis Jinx

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

St. Louis, June 14.—First baseman Mickey Vernon was reclaimed by the Nats from the Cleveland Indians today in a sudden swap for Pitcher Dick Weik that beat the June 15 trading deadline by 36 hours.

Washington owner Clark Griffith made the trade at the insistence of Manager Bucky Harris, desperate for a first baseman since dealing off Eddie Robinson to the White Sox May 30.

Griffith was reluctant to part with the fast-balling 22-year-old Weik for the 32-year-old Vernon who has been hitting only .189 this season, but succumbed to Harris declarations that "Weik isn't helping us any." Thus, Vernon, the Nats' first baseman for most of a decade before he was traded to Cleveland in 1948 in the Robinson deal, returns to the Washington club for which he won the 1946 league batting title with an average of .353.

Deal Completed by Phone

Griffith started negotiations with the Indians when they were in Washington last week, and completed them today by long-distance telephone.

At Cleveland, General Manager Hank Greenberg declared "we had better offers for Vernon from the Tigers and Yankees, but we didn't want to provide either of those teams with a first baseman."

Harris had been frantic for a first baseman since the White Sox deal, and never visioned Irv Noren as any more than a stop-gap.

"We know Vernon can play first base," said Harris, "and we're hoping that with us he will start to hit the ball again. It will permit me to return Noren to center field where he belongs, and it strengthens both our infield and outfield—I'm positive." In contrast to Griffith, who still visioned stardom for Weik, Harris was out of patience with the big boy's lack of control.

"I hope he finds it at Cleveland, except when we face him," said Harris, generously.

Weik Won 3 Last Year

The property of the Nats for the six years he was paid a $5000 bonus for signing out of Peoria, Ill., high school, Weik had shown only flashes of pitching skill. He won three games, lost 12 last season, won none this year. He was plagued with wildness again, after closing out the 1949 season with consecutive shutouts against the A's and Browns.

The fancy-fielding Vernon has failed to hit .300 since his sur-

See TRADE, Page 22, Column 3.

St. Louis, June 14.—Chico Marrero, their Cuban comrade, fetched the Nats out of their four-game slump by throttling the troublesome Browns with four hits this warm evening.

Senor Marrero, unperturbed by the fact that his pitching opponent was Ned Garver, the Browns' ace, took full charge of the ball game to deliver a 4-1 victory to the Nats.

He was quite magnificent and missed a shutout triumph only because of the rare sequence of two consecutive errors by Sam Dente that gave the Browns their only run of the night.

Chico Gets Tough

When Al Evans' two-bagger lifted Marrero into a 2-1 lead in the sixth, he became exceedingly tough for the Browns to deal with. In fact, only one of 'em got to first base—Pinch Hitter Ray Coleman, who singled with two out in the eighth.

The chunky Cuban thus put an end to the Nats' seven consecutive losses to the Browns, and also disrupted the four-game winning streak Garver took to the mound with him. In the process he was getting his dipsy-doo curve ball over the plate, walking nobody.

The Nats piled into Garver for nine of the 11 hits. Their last two were off former Nat Tom Ferrick who moved into the game in the ninth and was saluted by Irv Noren's fourth homer of the season—a 400-foot blast into the lower stands of right center field.

Stops Browns

That the little senor was a mighty man, he indicated to the Browns and their 3077 customers in the first inning after Don Lenhardt opened up against him with a triple to center. Lenhardt didn't score. Marrero fanned Kokos, watched Yost take Lollar's grounder and throw Lenhardt out at the plate, and then fanned Sievers.

The Browns didn't connect for another hit until Kokos singled in the fourth. In the fifth, Marrero had two out when Dente failed him twice, making a wild throw on Friend's grounder and then booting Upton's ground ball. Garver singled to right to tie the score at 1-1 at that point.

After that, Marrero was unyielding. He faced only 13 men in the last four innings, one over par.

Dente Makes 2 Errors

Dente partially atoned for his pair of fifth-inning errors when he beat out an infield single with two down in the sixth. Evans was the next hero. He scored Dente all the way from first with a line-drive two-bagger to center.

Marrero himself personally, gave himself the comfort of an other run that made it 3-1 in the eighth. Garver had two out when he walked Dente, whereupon Evans nubbed a single to right. Marrero made his second hit of the year, a single to left, that scored Dente.

Noren's home run smash in the ninth was a farewell gift to his ma and pa who were watching from a box adjacent the Nats dugout, en route to their California home. In the light of Marrero's pitching it was superfluous, but exceedingly well-hit.

IN SHORT . . . the Indians tried in vain to locate Mickey Vernon today in time to fly him into the Nats' lineup tonight. He'll report tomorrow . . . the Nats today optioned rookie first Baseman Fred Taylor, from Ohio State U., to their Chattanooga farm . . . proof that the Nats are trying to win for Bucky Harris was heard in the statement of Johnny Ostrowski after last night's double loss to the Browns. Said Ostrowski: "I was ashamed to walk into the clubhouse." . . .

Philadelphia, June 14 (AP).—Max Lanier held the Philadelphia Phillies to six hits tonight as the St. Louis Cardinals won their seventh straight game by a 4-2 count. The triumph, Lanier's fourth successive mound victory, increased the Cards' lead over the idle Dodgers to three and one-half games.

In scoring their second straight at the expense of the Phils, the pace setting Cards broke a 2-2 deadlock in the eighth. Enos Slaughter singled but was forced at second by Johnny Lindell. Marty Marion came through with a triple which produced one run and Del Rice drove the St. Louis shortstop home with the other.

The Cardinals scored a run in each of the first two innings. The Phils put together singles by Del Ennis and Andy Seminick, a double by Willie Jones and an infield out for their two tallies in the sixth.

Coast Wants Big 10's Best

Victoria, B. C., June 14 (AP).—The Pacific Coast Conference will try to renew its Rose Bowl pact with the Big Ten on a basis of each Conference sending its best team to the New Year's Day classic each year.

This word came unofficially today from the final session of the summer meeting of the P. C. C., just before delegates headed for a Seattle-bound boat. None would be quoted as confirming or denying the report.

St. Teresa's Wins CYO Game, 8 to 4

Bobby Rusevlyan pitched a five-hitter and struck out 12 men to lead St. Teresa's to an 8-4 victory over St. Francis de Sales in a Junior CYO boys' quarter-final game yesterday at Anacostia.

In other games, St. Ann's defeated St. Aloysius, 14-1, and Sacred Heart defeated St. Michael's, 11-6. The fourth quarter-finals game between Holy Comforter and St. James, will be played at 5 p. m. today at Turkey Thicket.

Bob Wolfe Trails Medalist by 4 In Eastern Golf

Greenwich, Conn., June 14.—Bobby and Billy Wolfe, cousin golf stars of Devitt School, Washington, both placed high in the first flight of the Eastern Interscholastic golf championship today at the Greenwich Country Club.

Gene Eyler of Trinity Pawling was medalist with a 74-73—147 in the 36-hole qualifying play on the par 71 course.

Bob tied for second low medal play card with Pete Arend of Lawrenceville, both nailing 77-74—151 cards.

Bill carded 84-74—158. The brothers' cards for the second 18 holes today were both 37-37—74.

Weir Horse Romps Over Small Field

By Walter Haight
Post Sports Editor

Delaware Park, June 14.—On a Flag Day program, the colors of Royal Governor waved here today, Mrs. Esther duDont Weir's able son of Pilate came with a bold rush through the stretch and just wouldn't be flagged down, winning by three lengths in rather easy fashion.

In fact, Royal Governor apparently was conceded victory before he went on the track. Only four rivals appeared in the overnight entries and one of these, Slambang, was scratched.

A driving second to the easy-running Royal Governor was Sylvester W. Labrot, jr.'s Taran. Five lengths back came Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Algasir to be third, eight lengths in front of the trailing High Bracket.

A crowd of 10,000 played Royal Governor as if he were money in the bank. When all was said and done the win mutuel was $2.70. The winner was clocked in 1:45 1/5 for the mile and a sixteenth over a track muddy from torrential downpours early this morning.

This was Royal Governor's first victory since he annexed the Widener Handicap at Hialeah last winter. On that occasion he took down $50,000 in earnings. Today he added $1800.

Another rider, Jim Fitzgerald, was disciplined by the stewards, who evidently are taking one-a-day tablets as far as the jockeys are concerned. Fitzgerald was given 5 days on the ground for "carelessly allowing his mount, Bo Mowlee, to go in after the start of the seventh race on Tuesday's program."

Mt. Vernon High Plays in Alabama

Montgomery, Ala., June 14 (AP).—A third entry, Mount Vernon High of Alexandria, Va., has been received for the Southeastern States High School baseball tournament in Tuscaloosa, Ala., June 22-24.

The Mount Vernon entry, representing Virginia, was received yesterday by the Alabama high school athletic association.

Nats Get Mickey Vernon From Indians for Dick Weik

prising feat of beating Ted Williams out for the batting crown in 1946. Two years later, he went to the Indians along with Early Wynn in the trade that brought the Nats Robinson, and Pitchers Joe Haynes and Ed Klieman.

With the Indians last season, however, Vernon had a tolerable batting average of .291, and hit 18 homers.

This season, he lost out to big Luke Easter in the battle for the first base job, and it is Easter's success that impelled the Indians to trade Vernon in an attempt to bolster their pitching staff.

Vernon has played 28 games for the Indians in 1950, been at bat 90 times, and made only 17 hits, all of them singles for a meager .189 average. "Maybe he'll be happier in Washington where he won't have any competition for the first-base job," speculated Harris. "Vernon's 32 years don't perturb me. He's a healthy fellow, a good liver, and there's never been anything wrong with his speed. He'll make it a faster club."

Four successive losses to the lowly White Sox and Browns helped Harris to put across with Owner Griffith his plan to trade Weik for Vernon. "We can't go along like this," he declared and he couldn't have picked a better time to impress Griffith.

The Nats attempted to get Vernon here in time for tonight's game with the Browns, but Greenberg couldn't locate the first baseman in time to put him on a plane from Cleveland. He will be here tomorrow for the finale with the Browns.

Noren's return to the outfield will give Harris two fixtures in that department. "We'll put Noren in center, move Mele back to right, and it will be a rat-race among the others for the left field job," he said.

Bogart Picked For State Title

Baltimore, June 14 (AP).—Ralph Bogart of Chevy Chase looms as the golfer to beat again in the annual Maryland State amateur championship starting tomorrow at Baltimore Country Club's Five Farms course.

The finals of the past two State tourneys have been identical—Bogart beating Jim Gardner of the Washington Golf and Country Club, 1 up.

There will be 85 golfers in tomorrow's 18-hole qualifying round. The best 32 will start match play Friday with two rounds daily leading up to Sunday's 36-hole final. The Five Farms course in Timonium is 6,630 yards long with a par of 70.

Eastern High Lights Bill Now Up to Congress

The House District Committee yesterday recommended that Congress appropriate $50,000 to expand the Eastern High stadium seating capacity from 5500 to 10,000, and to erect a lighting system for night football.

The bill is expected to go before the House within two weeks, and if no unforseen hitch develops, the lighting and expansion should be completed before the coming football season begins.

Representative John McMillan (D., S. C.), who whipped the recent $28,000 high school sports appropriation bill through committee and the House, is also behind Eastern's bill.

Bill Bennings

AT DELAWARE PARK.

DEAR FOLKS:

The stewards here have been holding up programs for 15 minutes to view movies of various races while the public, uninformed about the cause, has sweated it out. It might be a good idea for the movie-minded stewards to dig up the films of the two previous races on Brookmeade Stable's Jungle Feast. This 5-year-old was a common last two sprints but today, with Joe Culmone up, he suddenly became a ball of fire and ran away from his rivals. Speaking of those long delays, the crowd is left out in the cold. No "foul claim" sign is displayed and the board does not boast an "inquiry" sign. Friend Bill (Baltimore Sun) Boniface brings out that at many tracks not only is the "inquiry" flashed, but an arrow points to the horse or horses involved. Somebody should get on the job. See you on the rail—BILL.

Margaret E Wins At Cumberland

Cumberland, June 14.—K. Santill's Margaret E outgamed Mrs. J. Y. Christmas' Rough Cloud in the stretch to annex the $1200 Clary Club Purse today. S. B. Webb's Majeto was third some two lengths farther back in the 6½ furlongs test.

Not until the final yards was Jockey L. Harris, aboard Margaret E, able to take command and draw away from the front running Rough Cloud.

Mrs. George Fox's Real Wren was destroyed after suffering a broken shoulder during the running of the third race. Jockey H. Wallace escaped injury

Milk for Children Gets Through Under the Emergency Distribution Set-Up

1. THE CALL—Unable to leave her home, Mrs. Edward Mates of 1637 Fort Dupont st. se., a member of the Group Health Association, puts in a call to the association for emergency milk certificate. She struggles with her children, Michael, 21 months and Andrea, 4 months

2. THE CONTACT—At the Group Health Association, Arlene Murphy of 5101 North Capitol st., processes Mrs. Mates' request and passes a doctor's emergency milk certificate to Motorcycle Policeman Woody H. Crawford, who delivers it to Police Headquarters. From there it is sent to a dairy

3. THE DELIVERY—Mrs. Mates' original call was put in at 11 a. m. At 3 p. m. Aubrey Jenkins, route foreman for the Embassy Dairy, finds the family waiting as he delivers four quarts of the precious fluid. Residents who do not have regular physicians should call the District Medical Society

By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

4. THE CONSUMER—A few minutes after the milk delivery, baby Andrea takes her bottle. The emergency milk supply plan sped up as about 20,000 quarts were sold over the counter. Policemen picked up 410 certificates for milk deliveries to homes. (Related stories on Page 1)

GAO to Clarify Status Of Grade Promotions Blocked in Money Bill

The General Accounting Office will hand down a formal and official decision on whether grade promotions can be given employes in the many agencies that have funds tied up in the deficiency bill. This is the story:

In approving the joint resolution that allowed these many agencies to meet their regular pay rolls through June 30, a provision was written into it which seemed to prohibit grade promotions between May 22 and June 30.

Agency heads immediately sought clarification on the wording from GAO. At the time, GAO officials informally advised them that it was their opinion that grade promotions would have to be suspended for that period in those agencies covered by the deficiency bill.

The "advisory" opinion was challenged by agency legal eagles who insisted that the wording "no funds may be used to pay compensation of any employe in a grade higher than the grade of such employe on May 22, 1950" applied only to the Office of the Housing Expediter. Since the wording of the resolution wasn't clear, GAO decided to reconsider the entire matter.

As a result, many agencies suspended grade promotions temporarily; others decided to take a chance and they have ignored the resolution. For the past week GAO officials have been seeking the "intent" of Congress toward grade promotions in passing the resolution. Key appropriation leaders are divided on the question; some believe it was intended to suspend all grade promotions, while others insist the ban was meant to apply only to OHE. In other words, GAO will have to make the decision on its own—a decision that will be binding on most agencies.

Meantime, a new resolution is being drafted—one to advance funds to Federal agencies for a temporary period after July 1. This means that all hope has been abandoned to get Congressional approval of the omnibus budget bill by the July 1 deadline. The Senate Appropriations Committee won't act on the measure before that time.

Agencies will need money by July 15 to meet payrolls. The new resolution to free funds for that purpose will undoubtedly clear up the confusion over grade promotions.

House Unit Votes Bill Continuing Day Care Centers to July, 1951

Tables Measure For Fixing Liquor Prices, Approves Changes in 2 Titles

A bill to continue the Washington child day care centers for one year, through June 30, 1951, was approved yesterday by a 9-to-5 vote of the House District Committee.

The measure now goes to the House as the District group's alternative to the permanent child day care bill passed by the Senate.

In another action, the District Committee voted to kill for this session a bill for fixing liquor prices in the District by "fair trade" contracts. A number of organizations representing the liquor industry had supported and the District government had opposed the bill.

Other bills cleared by the committee in a morning executive meeting and forwarded to the House would:

1. Tighten provisions of the architects' registration law in the District. The measure has the backing of engineering and architects' groups. A similar measure is before the Senate District Committee with the indorsement of a subcommittee headed by Senator J. Allen Frear, jr. (D., Del.). The House committee took no action on a proposed registration law for engineers.

2. Change the title of the District Health Office and his assistant to Director of Public Health and Assistant Director of Public Health.

FundCutEnds Security for 8 Children

"Eight to ten" minor children, now on the Arlington County Welfare Department's foster care rolls, will have to be dropped shortly after July 1.

Arlington Welfare Director John E. Howell said yesterday his department would have to abandon payments for them because of a 40 percent cut in State and local foster care allocations, effective with the new fiscal year.

Howell said a $21,240 budget for Arlington foster care was approved by the General Assembly. The sum includes State and matching county funds. A $32,000 appropriation is needed, Howell said, to maintain the foster care program on its current level.

Last year the State authorized $27,500 in State and local matching funds for foster care in Arlington. The county contributed $4500 more in unmatched funds, Howell said.

The Welfare Department is paying an average of $50 a month for the care of 61 children in foster homes. Most of them have been committed to the Welfare Department by the courts. Parents abandoned or abused the children, or were living in homes where illness, for example, made proper care impossible.

Among cases the Welfare Department definitely must drop, Howell said, is a family of 3 children, aged 5 to 11, whose care costs $105 monthly.

The children, committed by the court, have been in a foster home in a rural area for the last four years. Their father is now in jail. Their mother, a cosmetic worker, has a record of arrests for drunkenness and prostitution.

July 10 Hearing Set for AB&W On Fare Increase

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday set July 10 as a hearing date on the A. B. & W. Bus Co.'s request for a five-cent increase on most of its interstate cash fares.

A similar increase on A. B. & W. fares within Virginia has already been granted by the State Corporation Commission.

At a preliminary conference yesterday, the ICC also agreed to hold a hearing July 17 on requested increases in "Pentagon" fares, between Virginia Government installations and the District. A joint 16-cent rate now exists for passengers who use both the Capital Transit Co. and either the Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington, or Washington, Virginia and Maryland Coach Co.

Each of the participants in the joint fare now wants a 15-cent share of the rate, thus posing the possibilty of a 30-cent total rate, one way.

Pacifist Wins Citizenship Belatedly

A conscientious objector who tried unsuccessfully to become naturalized in 1944 was one of 54 persons granted American citizenship yesterday in Alexandria Federal Court.

Judge Albert V. Bryan administered the oath of allegiance to Verner Nielsen, 37, after a special hearing occasioned by his refusal to swear that he would bear arms.

After the 53 others were sworn in a mass ceremony, Miss Thelma Proctor, a Bureau of Immigration examiner, told Judge Bryan that an earlier petition by Nielsen had been rejected in District Court because of his beliefs. She said, however, that the Supreme Court has since ruled conscientious objectors may be admited to citizenship if they swear to uphold the Constitution in all other respects.

Belgian Misses Ceremony

"Do you mean to say that you object only to an obligation that would require you to kill another man?" Judge Bryan asked Nielsen. "Yes, your honor," Nielsen replied. The judge then administered the oath.

An attractive Belgian housewife missed the citizenship ceremonies because, she said, she was sent to the wrong courthouse by a passerby.

Mrs. Nadine Donovan, 23, of 1717 N. Taylor st., Arlington, Va., told court officials she arrived with her husband in front of the Federal building five minutes before the scheduled ceremonies. To make sure, she said, she arked a passerby the way to the District Court and was directed to the Alexandria Police Court, five blocks away.

Must Wait 6 Months

When Mrs. Donovan arrived in the proper courtroom she had missed the roll call and was told she would have to wait until next December to become an American citizen.

Following the formal hearing, the new citizens were welcomed by Catholic, Protestant and Jewish clergymen in a patriotic ceremony conducted by the Dr. Elisha Dick Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The clergymen participating were the Rev. E. F. Campbell, pastor of the First Baptist Church, the Rev. Joseph Schwartz, assistant pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church, and Rabbi Nathan Gaynor of Congregation Agudas Achim.

Seventy-five employes of the Naval Ordnance Laboratory at White Oak, Md., will be honored for long-term Government service at 1 p. m. today at the base.

Rear Admiral B. Hall Hanlon, commander of the laboratory, and Dr. Ralph D. Bennett, technical director, will present pins to 26 employes with 30 years service. Forty-nine others will receive 20-year pins.

Md. Bus Line Extended Downtown

Oxon Hill, 2 Other WM&A Services Begin Operation On New Routes

The Washington, Marlboro & Annapolis Motor Lines yesterday won the fight to extend its Oxon Hill bus line across South Capitol Street Bridge into downtown Washington.

The District Public Utilities Commission ordered extension of this line and the rerouting across the new bridge of the company's Suitland express and North Beach lines.

W. M. & A. Traffic Manager John A. Chew said the changes went into effect yesterday afternoon.

The company said it had sought the reroutings from Pennsylvania ave. and Sousa Bridge as timesavers. But officials testified extension of the Oxon Hill line to the Pennsylvania ave. and 11th st. terminal was necessary to make the route worth operating.

Until yesterday persons using the Oxon Hill route, to reach downtown Washington, were forced to change to Capital Transit Co. buses at the Atlantic st. terminal, near South Capitol st. W. M. & A. now operates only three round trips a day over the route.

Capital Transit Co. opposed the extension on the grounds it would take away business.

Man Accused of Assault On Policeman Is Cleared

Alfred Stewart, 20, of 1868 California st. nw., was acquitted yesterday before Judge Burnita Shelton Matthews in District Court of assaulting a policeman.

He had been charged with assaulting Pvt. George Wolfgang of the Thirteenth Precinct in the emergency room at Freedmen's Hospital on March 26.

D. C. Amvets Open Convention Today

The District Department of Amvets will open its three-day convention tonight at 8 o'clock with a business meeting at the Willard Hotel.

Adoption of resolutions and election of officers will highlight the convention which will be preceded tonight at 6:30 by a dinner given by the Sad Sacks at the Four Hundred Club.

Man, Found Dead in Md., Held Suicide

The "mystery death" of a man whose body was found Saturday near Savage, Md., was certified yesterday as a suicide by poisoning.

Dr. Russell S. Fisher, chief medical examiner of Maryland, issued a certificate of suicide at 4:30 p. m. He said that the tissues of the man's body contained an amount of barbiturates basic component of many sleeping-pill preparations, that could only have been self-administered.

An aspirin bottle near the body was virtually full of barbiturates, he said.

Dr. Fisher added that he doubted the man's throat had been slashed—at least before death. Some throat organs were missing when the body was found.

Still unsolved yesterday was the question of the man's identity.

Washington, Baltimore and Maryland State police were attempting to get a lead from extensive dental work in the victim's mouth.

Falls Church Sells $700,000 School Bonds

The Falls Church City Council last night accepted the bid of Otis & Co., New York investment house, for the sale of $700,000 in school bonds.

The company's low bid was $701,988, at an interest rate of 2.25 percent. The principal and interest are payable in 25 years.

The bonds, authorized May 15, are for construction of a new high school, a new elementary school and for improvements to Madison Elementary School.

Second low bid was by Kidder, Peabody & Co., of New York, for $703,009.30, 2.4 percent interest. Two other companies also submitted bids.

In other business, the council heard John A. K. Donovan, president of the Falls Church Bar Association, and Robert C. Fitzgerald and Arthur C. Stickley, associate members.

They requested a yearly budget of $5000 for Falls Church civil court provided for in the new charter. The city now has a trial justice court.

Council agreed to study the proposal and consider it at a public hearing on the city budget Monday night.

A public hearing was scheduled for July 10 on the rezoning of land owned by M. T. Rust in the 1000 block of West Broad st.

Failure to File Withholding Tax Returns Costs $25

A Washington man was fined $25 in Municipal Court yesterday for failing to obey an Internal Revenue Bureau subpena to file his withholding tax returns. The bureau described the case as "unique."

Defendant Charles W. Cook of 625 Kenyon st. nw. was brought before Judge Armond Scott yesterday under an arrest warrant sworn out in the District Attorney's office. Cook, who operates an auto repair service, pleaded guilty. Bureau officials said it was the first time since the withholding tax was begun in 1943 that such drastic measures had been used.

According to an Internal Revenue Bureau spokesman, Cook had been asked over a four-month period to file withholding tax returns. He refused. On May 10, the Baltimore Collector issued a "Collector's summons," ordering Cook to bring in his books. When this order was ignored, the bureau swore out the arrest warrant.

Dr. Goodloe Guilty On Three Charges; Faces 9-Year Term

Jury Finds He Tried To Silence Woman With Money After Illegal Operation

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Dr. William A. Goodloe, 53, was convicted yesterday of performing an abortion, criminal conspiracy, and attempting to bribe the complaining witness not to testify against him.

A District Court jury deliberated 80 minutes before rendering the verdict of guilty on the three charges. The jury foreman was Oliver Hoyem, 59, of 3000 Connecticut ave. nw.

Dr. Goodloe

Judge Alexander Holtzoff committed Goodloe to jail and referred the case to the probation office for investigation. He set sentencing for June 23. Goodloe faces a possible maximum sentence of nine years and $6000 in fines on the three counts.

The judge told the jury, "There is no doubt as to the justice of your verdict and (the court) concurs in it."

Bail Refused

In refusing Goodloe bail pending sentence, Judge Holtzoff declared:

"The defendant's story doesn't hold water and the jury obviously didn't believe it. I am of the opinion he committed perjury during the trial . . . I think the offense is aggravated by the attempt to pervert justice which I think saps at the very foundation of our institutions."

The operation was performed on Miss Gloria M. Huffman, 26. Statuesque and brown-haired, Miss Huffman, a Baltimorean, said that Dr. Goodloe was paid $350 and performed the abortion in his offices, 1836 S st. nw., last March.

She said she had been intimate with Capt. Andrew Gleeson, of Fort Belvoir, on November 5, and shortly afterward she discovered she was pregnant. Gleeson said that he learned of Dr. Goodloe through troops at the Army base.

Miss Huffman remained in Dr. Goodloe's home for three days after the operation, and reported some time later to Gallinger Hospital, when she continued bleeding. It was then that police interviewed her.

She said that in May, Miss Alice L. Galusha, a friend of Dr. Goodloe's, came to her in Baltimore. Miss Huffman charged that she was offered a free trip to California, including incidental expenses, if she stayed in a place where she could not be "contacted."

Shakedown Claimed

Dr. Goodloe's defense was that he treated Miss Huffman merely for bleeding, and never suspected that she was pregnant. He said that he believed that the charges were brought against him as a "shakedown."

Miss Galusha, who was indicted with him on the witness-tampering count, now awaits a separate trial.

Final argument yesterday in the case between Assistant United States Attorney Arthur J. McLaughlin and defense attorney Charles E. Ford grew heated.

McLaughlin said of Goodloe:

"So far as he is concerned, Miss Huffman could have bled to death in the streets. He was hungry for that dollar."

At another point, McLaughlin declared:

"Don't let this defendant drag an honorable profession in the dirt by letting him get away with performing an abortion and then attempting to obstruct the ordinary course of law and justice."

Ford asked the jury:

"From what pregnancy did this case come? Maybe it was a general nine months before who made her pregnant and now she wants to dump an abortion on this defendant. The unemployed woman from California to Baltimore to Washington to Ft. Belvoir . . ."

Ford said that Dr. Goodloe was a reputable physician with more than 25 years of practice in Washington.

When the jury foreman said the defendant was guilty, Ford asked that the jury be polled. All said "guilty" except for the 12th talesman, Clarence Mayo, 60, of 1315 Franklin st. ne., who said "not guilty."

Then, when asked by the judge, Mayo indicated that he had voted Goodloe "not guilty" on the first ballot but had changed his mind.

Ford said he would appeal the verdict.

Mary Brooks, Ex-Slave, Dies at 114

Mrs Mary Brooks, whose sight was restored last month after 30 years' of total blindness, died yesterday in her 115th year. She lived at the Home for the Aged of the Little Sisters of the Poor, 220 H st. ne.

Interviewed at Gallinger last month, Mrs. Brooks told reporters that sight was making life more pleasant than it had been in a long time.

She was taken to the hospital several months ago for pains in her feet. While there Sister Matilda of the Little Sisters of the Poor asked doctors to look at the patient's eyes. A cataract was removed and Mrs. Brooks had her sight again.

Born a slave in Prince Georges County on December 29, 1834, Mrs. Brooks has been living at the home since 1942. Funeral arrangements have not yet been announced.

Mrs. Hattie Thornhill Dies in Richmond

Mrs. Hattie Southworth Thornhill, 74, a former Washington resident, died Tuesday at the home of her sister Mrs. John G. Dunston, sr., in Richmond, Va.

Mrs. Thornhill, who lived at 11 5th st. se. until a few months ago, was the widow of Waverlie F. Thornhill. She was a native of Tranquilla, Thornsburg, Spottsylvania County, Va., and came to Washington many years ago.

She was a member of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, 301 A st. se., the W. F. Hunt Chapter of the Order of Eastern Star and the J. E. B. Stuart Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Funeral services will be at 3 p. m. Thursday in Richmond, with burial at Riverview Cemetery, Richmond.

Funeral services for Hugo Oberg, employe of the Interstate Commerce Commission here from 1907 to 1920, will be held at 9 a. m. Friday in St. Francis de Sales Church, 2021 Rhode Island ave. ne. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Oberg died Monday morning in East Orange, N. J. He was 80. In 1920 he resigned as a member of the ICC board of suspension to take an administrative post with the Boston (Mass.) Port Commission.

His wife, Mrs. Julia M. Oberg died three years ago. He is survived by four children, Mrs. John Williams of East Orange, Frank J. Oberg of Washington, Miss Mary D. Oberg of Boston and Capt. John W. Oberg, Air Force officer of Sacramento, Calif.

Jean E. Charon Dies; Congressional Aide

Jean E. Charon, 49, secretary to Representative Aime J. Forand (D., R. I.) died Tuesday at his summer home in Riverside, R. I., it was learned here yesterday.

Seriously ill for the past year, Mr. Charon lived at 3800 W st. se., before his health forced him to return to Rhode Island.

Born in Manville, R. I., Mr. Charon was a graduate of Providence College, Providence, R. I.

During the depression, he worked as a clerk for the WPA office in Providence. He came to Washington with Representative Forand when the latter was first elected to Congress in 1936, and has been the Congressman's secretary every since.

During his illness, he returned to work here in February but was unable to continue and left for Rhode Island again a month later.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Edith Charon, and a 2-year old son, Paul.

The funeral will be held at 10 a. m. Saturday from the Fournier and Fournier funeral home in Woonsocket, R. I.

U. S. Weapons Are Best Ever, Griffith Tells Flag Day Crowd

Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

SALUTE TO OLD GLORY—Elwood Giarth, 7, of 545 Newcombe st. se., pledges allegiance at the Flag Day exercises at the Sylvan Theater grounds. A flag, 40x60, serves as a background for the demonstration, attended by a crowd of 5000

The equipment and weapons of America's armed forces "are the best ever devised and even better ones are being developed," Assistant Scretary of Defense Paul Griffith told a Flag Day crowd of 5000 yesterday on the Sylvan Theater grounds.

Noting that "we are arming as we have never armed before in peacetime," Griffith declared:

"We are striving in every way to be fully prepared to resist any possible armed assault against us and to launch such devastating retaliation against any possible enemy who may engage us as to deter him."

The colorful ceremonies were sponsored by the Government Employes' Council of the American Federation of Labor and the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission.

The United States Navy Band and the Newmarket (Ind.) High School Band, which sold two carloads of feed at 24 cents a bag to finance its trip here, played and the Sesquicentennial Chorus sang.

William C. Doherty, of the Employes' Council and chairman of the event, gave the address of welcome. The program included such features as a mass pledge of allegiance to the flag and a parade of State and territorial flags by a detail from the Third Infantry Regiment.

Some $950,000 in U. S. Savings Bonds were either bought or pledged by labor groups and union men at a booth set up on the grounds, Mrs. Thelma Dawson, chairman of the Washington Central Labor Union (AFL) savings bond committee, announced.

Griffith warned that "the world is divided into opposite political faiths, one based on the natural brotherhood of men, the other on the exploitation of differences between men.

"Already too many people, misled by the false promises of communism, have sacrificed their liberties only to learn that deceit, poverty and tyranny under a police state are their rewards. So we are meeting the threat by every effort to make available to all peoples who cherish freedom the means to secure it and to protect it. And we are building our own strength."

Funeral Rites For Mrs. Gale Will Be Today

Marian Hyde Gale, wife of the late George H. Gale, and mother of Mrs. Frank M. Russell, died at 4 p. m., Monday, at Whitehall Nursing Home, in Falls Church, Va.

Mrs. Gale came to Washington from New York City with her family in 1921 and has resided in this area ever since. She was born in Brooklyn, New York, March 7, 1872, the daughter of Charlotte Morgan Hyde and Simeon Thomas Hyde. She was the tenth descendant of Elder William Brewster of the Mayflower, as well as being descended from several who fought in the American Revolution.

Mrs. Gale is also survived by three grandchildren, Gale Russell, Morgan Niles Russell of Falls Church, Va.; James Mosgrove Colwell, jr., and one sister, Mrs. Frank E. Tyng of New York City.

A memorial service will be held at Hines funeral home, 11:30 a. m., today. Mrs. Russell requests friends send contributions to the American Cancer Society, DC division instead of flowers.

George H. Gale was formerly sales manager with the Powers Accounting Machine Corp., now Remington-Rand, in Washington.

After Two Years' Courtship, Girl Is Engaged To Man With Alcoholic Tendencies; He Denies Cause for Worry, but She Fears Trouble Ahead

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Bill is 21, I am 19, and after keeping steady company for two years, we became engaged four months ago. But I am badly in need of good sound advice as regards his drinking.

Bill at present holds a good position which offers future security. He is broad-minded, intelligent, a diligent worker, has many friends and is well liked. My parents like him and I get along nicely with his family. In short, he is all that a girl could ask for except that he drinks to a fault, which causes big arguments between us.

Whenever there is a special event such as a wedding, engagement party, New Year's Eve party or any big holiday celebration, Bill's fun consists in drinking excessively, being the life of the party, and getting carried home in the end.

Drink Ruled Girl's Father

AT MY sister's wedding last week Bill was one of the ushers, and although he had promised me a month before that he would behave at this affair, he got drunk as usual. I found it necessary to leave without him, and I don't mean to be a prude. I favor a good time and I enjoy a drink myself, but Bill's kind of drinking is too much for me.

We have discussed this time and again. Here are some of the answers he gives: "You are just like my folks. You worry too much. Can't a guy have a little fun?" Or he'll say "I'll change, Virgie. Give me a little time." Then he'll say how sorry he is. But there seems to be so little promise of improvement.

My own father let drink rule him, which caused much heartache in our home and made mother old before her time. She had to bring up six children almost alone, and I couldn't match her patience and understanding. I love Bill very much and do hope we can straighten things out; but I'd make both of us miserable if we should marry with the drink problem unsolved. Please give us some much needed advice at once. Your counsel will be my decision. V. L.

Alcoholics Have Dual Personality

DEAR V. L.: Medical specialists whose practice includes many years' experience with alcoholic individuals have told me that, in general, compulsive drinkers of every social rank have this in common,—they are extraordinarily likeable and interesting when sober. (That is, before they're finally broken by the affliction, and reduced to husks of human beings.)

At their best, these harried souls are sensitive, gay, intuitive, compassionate, mentally adventurous, occasionally brilliant, never hidebound in their thinking. Potentially they are more delightful, certainly more stimulating companions than the typical solid citizen, whose thinking contains little lift or variety as a rule.

Thus the alcoholic personality is apt to be the most destructive love-choice a malleable girl can make, just because of this insidious spell the charmer exerts between bouts.

Pattern of Life With a Drinker

ONCE involved in a pattern of intimacy with a remorseful problem drinker, the domestic partner becomes a psychologically captive caretaker, in a sense sharing his descent along Skid Row, so long as he coasts that way. And she shares his debacle with a hypnotic air of "consent to martyrdom," even when her common sense and moral sense often shout that this debasing spiral should be renounced at least by her, since alcohol is not her master.

I am giving you this realistic slant on the alcoholic's personality, and the role he provides his wife, because I hope it will be the antidote to your smitten theory that Bill is all that a girl could ask for. He has heart-tearing appeal, no doubt. But weighed against his problem-drinking, that appeal is sucker bait. Don't let it trap you. It may stir your emotions but don't let it addle your head.

Like most alcoholics in the early rounds of addiction, Bill is denying his peril, even to himself. He spoofs and rebuffs your worry and pretends sprees are fun, in uneasy attempt to assure himself that there is no problem. He ought to face the fact that a serious ailment has him in hand, and that he needs expert help in getting the best of it. In the circumstances, you should not marry him, and he should relinquish you without blame. M. H.

Glamour History Repeats

You, Too, Can Make Eyes Like the Queen of the Nile

IT'S been a slow and gradual transition, but the accent in facial make-up has finally moved away from the lips and is definitely focused on the eyes. In the words of the gag writers, "the eyes have it!"

Two visitors to Washington this week point up the growing popularity of this 1950 trend in make-up, which began in high fashion circles a year ago, and has now captured the attention of the general public. Both are exponents of that fashion which calls for up-stanted, heavily outlined eyes and brows.

One is Eddie Senz of New York, make-up artist of stage and screen fame. The other is Robert Barron, representative of a nationally known cosmetic house, who is giving demonstrations of the latest eye make-up tricks at The Hecht Co.

CLEOPATRA'S FAMOUS EYE-LINE: Make-up emphasis centers this season on the eyes, and glamour is achieved by applying a few tricks wiith pencil, brush and paint. Dark line, drawn across the lid above the lash roots is extended upward at the outside corner. This outlines the shape of the eye and produces up-slant effect

From Cleopatra

The visit of Mr. Senz is noteworthy in that it serves as a reminder of just where we borrowed this eye accent idea from in the first place. From our old heroine, that femme fatale of history, Cleopatra, herself. And Mr. Senz is in town to do an authentic make-up job of the period 69-30 B. C. (Cleo's life span) on actress Paulette Goddard in tomorrow night's opening performance at the Olney Theater. La Goddard will play the lead role in Shaw's "Ceasar and Cleopatra" for the period ending June 24.

When the original Cleo ruled men's hearts along the Nile, facial make-up was already a highly developed art. The alluring Egyptian queen knew its value and presented a carefully made-up face to her suitors. Her eyes, long and oval, slanted upward at the corners, and their lines were heavily outlined with charcoal. Dots of red dye at either side gave the impresion of shadowy depths, a trick that actresses today continue to employ.

Lashes were stroked and beaded with a black liquid and charcoal was used to create smooth, dark brows to frame the eyes. Powder and lip rouge were also fashionable, but the emphasis was away from the mouth and on the eyes.

Glamour Technique

Proof of its appeal is seen in the crowds of women—of all ages—who this week are swarming around Mr. Barron, seeking clues on eye glamour technique.

Mr. Barron, formerly affiliated with the make-up department of Twentieth Century Fox, classifies the women according to eye "type" and offers a basic eye routine.

Here is the general outline for home application:

Starting with the eyebrows, use a small brush to remove face powder. Then, using both a brown and black pencil, fill in the eyebrow shape. The black is used to greater advantage for flecking short hairs.

Next, rub a fine film of eye cream as close to the eye lashes as possible to produce a sheen and provide a base for the pencil line. Take a well sharpened brown pencil and carefully trace along the edge of the lid just above the lash roots. Commence at the corner of the eye and continue out to the end. For special evening glamour, you can continue this line slightly upward to affect an illusion of an extra eyelash.

Apply eye shadow with your finger, placing the heaviest amount on the center of the lid, and gently blending it outward. Work the shadow inward. To avoid "beady" mascara, use full, upward strokes from the root of the lashes to the tips.

Their Trust in Me

Much more than praise for fame or wealth . . . Or expert competence . . . I long for friends and to enjoy . . . Their utmost confidence . . . Their confidence that I shall strive . . . for someone else's sake . . . And that I shall in time fulfill . . .
Each promise that I make . . .
That I shall never once betray
. . . The trust they put in me . . .
However strong temptation is . . . Or great the urge may be
. . . I long to live a loyal life
. . . And prove that I am true . . .
In every little thought and word . . . And everything I do
. . . I want them to believe in me . . . And trust me to the end . . . And praise me not for glory but . . . Because I am their friend.

U.S. Envoy's Daughter to Be Married

MRS. BENJAMIN OURISMAN, before her marriage June 8, was Mrs. Veronica Annenberg of Philadelphia. The ceremony took place at the Mayflower Hotel. Colonel and Mrs. Ourisman left for Bermuda on a honeymoon and will live on River rd., Washington, when they return

THE United States Minister to the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan and Mrs. Gerald A. Drew announce the engagement of their daughter, Deirdre Elizabeth, to Capt. George S. Walz, USMC, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Walz of Coral Gables, Fla.

Miss Drew left Tuesday with her aunt, Miss Mary Lee Hunter of Ross, Calif., for Rome where they will join the younger sisters of the bride-elect, Misses Judy and Joan Drew. Both are students at Collegio Mariamonte.

Then all will proceed to the Drew residence in Jordan. The wedding will take place in early September at the American Legation in Amman. The newly-weds will spend their first year at Port Lyautey, French Morocco, where Captain Walz is commanding officer of the Marine Corps detachment at the Naval Air Base.

For the past year Miss Drew has resided with her maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis C. Hunter of Ross, Calif., while she was attending the Katharine Branson School. She also studied at Vassar College, and at schools in France and Switzerland. Her paternal grandfather is John S. Drew of San Francisco, Calif.

Captain Walz has served in the Marine Corps since his graduation in 1942 from the University of Miami. During the war he served with the Second Marine Division. He is a former aide de camp to Maj. Gen. Franklin A. Hart, commanding officer at Camp LeJeune, N. C.

Cargar—Rattazzi

Maj. and Mrs. Harry V. Cargar of Alexandria and Tripoli, Libya, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Alice Patricia Cargar, to Midshipman Stanley Eugene Rattazzi, USN, son of Mrs. Peter Rattazzi of Oakland, Calif., and the late Mr. Rattazzi. Midshipman Rattazzi will graduate from the United States Naval Academy next June, and the wedding will take place after his graduation.

Barry—Hemmer

Of interest in Washington and nearby Virginia is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Joan Catherine Barry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Barry of Alexandria, to Francis J. Hemmer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas H. Hemmer of Syracuse, N. Y.

The bride-to-be attended Fairfax Hall School for Girls at Waynesboro, Va., and is now a student at Syracuse University where she is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority. Mr. Hemmer is a graduate of Most Holy Rosary High School, Syracuse; attended Niagara University, and is at present studying at Le Moyne College, Syracuse. He served in the armed forces during the war.

Barwick—Fitzgerald

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Barwick of Clifton, N. J., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ruth Beatrice Barwick, to Morris R. Fitzgerald, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Fitzgerald of Washington.

Sen. Smith, Mrs. Cafritz 'Best Tailored'

Washington has scored twice in the newest list of best-dressed women, compiled by Custom Tailors Guild of America.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, and Mrs. Morris Cafritz are named as among the ten best-tailored women in America. The Senator is considered tops in Government; Mrs. Cafritz in the hostess division.

Also named are Ava Gardner, screen; Faye Emerson, television; Dorothy Shay, music; Gertrude (Gussie) Moran, sports; Ilona Massey, radio; Dorothy Kilgallen, journalism; Cyd Charisse, dancing, and Lynn Fontanne, theater.

Fred Balletta, New York tailor and chairman of the guild, announcing the list yesterday, said the following measuring rods were used in making the selections:

1. Ability to select suits which best highlight individuality, personality and figure.

2. Skill in accessorizing and choosing interesting color combinations, and the intangible ability to "wear clothes well."

Senator Smith emerged ahead of Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas in the Government class because she has greater skill in selecting suits which reflect her charm and dignity according to Mr. Balletta. Mrs. Cafritz won out over rivals because of her superior ability to "wear clothes well, and because of her wider variety of suits for all occasions."

MISS DORIS O'DONNELL was honored at a tea dance yesterday at the 1925 F Street Club

By Marie McNair

IT WAS deb-day in Washington yesterday.

Miss Sarah Woodley Alexander, Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Allen Alexander's pretty fair-haired daughter, made her bow at a ball at the Chevy Chase Club. At a tea dance at the Shoreham, Miss Sue Ann Rouse was presented to society by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Bohannon Rouse, while Mrs. Doris Fleeson entertained at a tea dance at the 1925 F Street Club for about 300 of the debutante group, in honor of her daughter, Miss Doris O'Donnell.

Sally Alexander who was graduated this week from Dana Hall School in Wellesley, Mass., brought three classmates back with her for her dance. They are Molly Ford of Ohio; Mary Jane Badger of Boston and Sally White of Quincy, Mass., who with Miss Alexander were entertained at dinner beforehand by the debutante's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Willmott Lewis, jr., at the Chevy Chase Club, the guests numbering 50. As Jack Morton and his orchestra tuned up at 10:30, Dr. and Mrs. Alexander and their daughter took their places to welcome the early guests.

Carried Nosegay Of Pink Roses

FRESH pink roses cascaded down the bouffant skirt of the debutante's white taffeta frock and formed the one shoulder strap. She held an old fashioned nosegay of pink roses in a white satin frill. Mrs. Alexander's gown was of changeable green net made with off-shoulder neckline.

Before the dance Rear Admiral and Mrs. F. W. McMahon entertained at dinner for their daughter, Miss Georgie McMahon, just returned from Principia College in St. Louis. Other guests were Miss Suzanne Johnson, Miss Norma Frost, Miss Caro Butler, Miss Carvel Breeding, Miss Jocelyn Murray, Lieut. William Hoover, Bob Nation, Berry Wallace, George Dunlap, Guy Stewart, Frank Lee, Jack Van Devanter, and Jeff Eckles.

Sally will spend the summer visiting some of her classmates and then go to the West Coast. Next Christmas when she's home from college, Mr. and Mrs. Burke Summers and Dr. and Mrs. William F. Burdick have planned dinner parties in her honor.

Flowers Decorated Ballroom Tables

FLOWERS sent to the debutante decorated the small tables which ringed the ballroom at Miss Rouse's debut tea dance. And carnations, gladioli and other spring flowers on stands were used throughout the room. The debutante, standing with her parents, wore a filmy white silk marquisette gown trimmed with ruching on the voluminous hoop skirt, and carried a nosegay of white carnations and roses tied with wide white satin ribbon. Mrs. Rouse chose orchid chiffon with a shoulder spray of orchids.

The debutante's assistants, identified by wristlets of white carnations, were Miss Cynthia Woll and Miss Jane McAtee, June debutantes; Miss Molly Holden, to make her debut at Christmas; Miss Polly Norment, Miss Joan Conger; Miss Joan Denton, Miss Louisa Smith of Riegelsville, Pa., and Miss Georganna Buchanan of Atlanta, the latter both house guests of the Rouses.

Maj. John Huba, USA, captained the dozen members of the floor committee for dancing to Sidney's orchestra. Others in the group were Lieut. (j. g.) William Edward Day Lucas 3d, USN; Lieut. (j. g.) Donn Carr McVey, USN; Rudolph Forster, Thomas Owen, Joseph Ives, Jack G. VanDevanter, John Berry Wallace, Paul Salembier Devine, John Thomas Crowley, John J. McDonald jr., and Capt. William Gladstone.

Buffet Supper Follows Dance

FOLLOWING the tea dance Mr. and Mrs. Rouse gave a small buffet supper for their daughter, her house guests, Major Huba, Thomas Owen and Joseph Ives.

Miss Rouse was graduated from Stone Ridge Country Day School of the Convent of the Sacred Heart and will be a student at Mount Vernon Junior College in the fall. Meanwhile she'll visit Miss Smith at Riegelsville this summer and spend several weeks at the seashore.

Doris O'Donnell's tea dance was a debut dividend, for she was introduced to society at a tea given by her mother at their home in Georgetown at Christmastime.

Doris wore white organdy, a charming frock with a Renoir neckline and lots of pleated ruffles on the full skirt. She wore shocking pink slippers, gloves that matched and carried a nosegay of pastel spring flowers. Her mother was in gray marquisette appliqued with white butterflies.

Vassar roommates here for the party were Polly Park and Molly Delafield, both of New York, and Joanne Whitaker who was Miss O'Donnell's roommate at St. Catherine's School in Richmond.

After the party Doris was guest of honor at a dinner given by Senator Harry Darby on the Shoreham Terrace. Others were Judith O'Brien, Kathryn Holmes, Sally Wilson, Mildred Coe, Carla Spaatz, Sue Dau, Bruce Sherman and Jay Boots of New York, Joseph Johnson, Arthur Brown, Lamar Caudle, Kim Vardaman, Francis Thomas, Colt de Wolfe, James Connelly and Lieut. David Pettit.

Garden Party Given At Potomac Estate

His daughter, Miss Leandra McCormick-Goodhart, a junior at Bradford Junior College, stood with him to welcome the guests. Although the party was not a debut, it gave Mr. McCormick-Goodhart an opportunity to introduce his daughter to his old friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira L. Ewers entertained at dinner last evening at the Carlton Hotel following the wedding rehearsal of Miss Elvira Agnes McDermott and William Barton Ewers who will be married this morning at the Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Michael Patrick McDermott, parents of the bride, and members of the wedding party.

Swing Your Partner, Hot Dog in Hand

Miss Frances Gore Haynes and Miss Rebecca White will be among those entertaining at supper parties before the "Dutch Treat Hoe-Down" gets under way at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club next Monday night.

"Dancin', singin' and swingin'," with hot dogs, beer and two orchestras for dancing, will take up the evening hours on Monday.

Patronesses include Mrs. John F. Whitely, Mrs. Albert W. Walker, Mrs. William B. Willard, Mrs. Seward Mott, Mrs. F. Eberhardt Haynes, Mrs. Neville Miller, Mrs. Cecil Kilpatrick, Mrs. Detlow Marthinson and Mrs. Allen Minnix.

On the "calico committee" are Rebecca White, Florence Walker, Mary Rapley, Frances Haynes, Betsy Bassett, Anne Carter, Judy Snowden, Jan Marthinson, Constance Logan, Frances Sternhagen, Yardley Minnix, Anne Kilpatrick, Betty Anne Sebrell, Janeth Lloyd and Gail Miller.

Mrs. Parker Dove is chairman of sponsors.

California Visitors Dine at Embassy

FOR the past several days Mrs. Gean McNealy of San Francisco, Calif., and her daughter, Miss Gale McNealy, have been visiting Mme. Baptista Pinheiro, wife of the Brazilian second secretary. Mrs. McNealy is a descendant of the Fargo family, of Wells Fargo fame. Miss McNealy will enter Vassar College in the fall.

With the Pinheiros, Mrs. McNealy and her daughter were guests Tuesday evening of the Ambassador, Mauricio Nabuco, at a dinner at the embassy. Ambassador Nabuco and his sister, Miss Carolina Nabuco, entertained at another dinner party last evening. It was a farewell for Miss Nabuco who is leaving tomorrow to spend the summer in Brazil.

Horsemanship Exhibit At Forestville Saturday

THE FIRST gymkhana to be put on by the Forestville Horse Show Association will take place on Saturday at the estate of Sydney Follin in Virginia's Fairfax County. A gymkhana, for the benefit of those unfamiliar with equine terms, is an exhibition of horsemanship which tests the skill of the rider and the horse.

Opening at 10 a. m. with pony rides for the children, the show will get under way at noon with a large Bar-b-que for the benefit of the local volunteer fire department. The main events will begin at 1 p. m. with entries from Washington, and Faquier, Fairfax and Arlington counties taking part.

Mrs. Nina Douglass Wysor returned last week aboard the Ile de France after spending four months in India, Palestine, Egypt and Europe. While in the Near East Mrs. Wysor visited El Alamein, Bengasi and Tobruck, famous battlefields of the last war. She will return to Washington after spending a few days in Boston and New York.

Dean Suter Weds Miss Elmer in New York

THE Very Rev. John Wallace Suter, Dean of the National Cathedral in Washington, and Miss Alice Hoyt Elmer of New York were married on June 13. The Rev. Dr. Arthur Lee Kinsolving performed the ceremony at St. James' Church, New York, in the presence only of members of the immediate families.

Dean Suter, the son of the late Rev. Dr. John W. Suter of Boston, Mass., is custodian of the Standard Book of Common Prayer in the United States. He is the widower of the late Mrs. Margaret Sturgis Suter, and the father of Mrs. Armistead B. Rood of Washington, John Wallace Suter, jr., of Grosse Pointe, Mich., and Richard Sturgis Suter of Alexandria, Va.

The bride, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Beebe Elmer of New York City, is a member of the Washington Junior League. She was graduated from Miss Porter's School, Farmington, Conn., in 1941 and was presented to society the following winter. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Herbert Charles Elmer of Ithaca, N. Y., and the late Professor Elmer, and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sherman Haight of New York.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a Navy blue suit with a pink straw hat. The couple will reside in Washington on return from their wedding trip.

DAR Annex Dedication Slated Friday

The new annex to the Daughterts of the American Revolution Chapter House will be dedicated Friday, 12 noon, giving the Washington patriotic ladies long - needed accommodations for their smaller parties and meetings.

The new wing has a small reception room, kitchen, office rooms and small bedrooms upstairs. Large picture windows in the knotty pine reception room, incidentally, will be dedicated to Miss Lillian Chenoweth, chairman of plans for the new annex.

Mrs. David Caldwell, vice president of the DAR Chapter House, will preside at the dedication ceremonies. And Mrs. Walter Collier, vice regent of Manor Chapter, will present the tablet honoring Miss Chenoweth on behalf of the chapter. Mrs. George Muller and Miss Helen Montgomery, also members of the Manor House Chapter, will unveil the tablet. Luncheon will follow the ceremonies.

Potomac Chapter, DAR, will hold its annual luncheon at the Columbia Country Club, June 17, at 1 p. m.

Captain Wendell Wolfe Chapter of the DAR elected Mrs. Charles E. Turner as vice regent, following the resignation of Miss Mabel A. Barkley, at the annual business meeting. Miss Louise Frey was elected chaplain. Mrs. Donald O. Woolf is the new delegate with Mrs. Royal E. Rostenbach as alternate.

Mrs. Robert Bachman was elected regent of the Irvine-Wells Chapter, DAR, at a recent meeting. Other officers are Miss Ruth Kelly, vice regent; Mrs. Edna Aldridge Smith, chaplain; Mrs. John Weeks Field, recording secretary; Mrs. Andrew Joel Coleman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Chester E. Barrows, treasurer; Mrs. Mercedes Berry Simpson, registrar, and Miss Mercedes Rhyro, historian.

Mrs. Benjamin Y. Martin is the newly elected regent of the Susan Riviere Hetzel Chapter, D. C. DAR. Other officers are Miss Mabel B. Hiatt, chaplain; Mrs. Harold L. Maynard, corresponding secretary; Miss Mildred W. Chancellor, registrar; Mrs. Wilmer Souder, librarian, and Mrs. Robert Clay Sherrill, delegate.

Dorothy Carr New President Of Ad Women

Miss Dorothy Carr, director of radio and television continuity for stations WMAL and WMAL-TV, yesterday was elected president of the Women's Advertising Club of Washington. The election followed a buffet supper at the Washington Hotel celebrating the seventh anniversary of the club.

Other new officers include Edna Holstrom, vice president; Miss Jean Osgood, recording secretary and historian; Miss Ruth Cotting, corresponding secretary, and Miss Violet Dudley, treasurer.

The new president, a native of Wenatchee, Wash., has lived in the Capital for 12 years. She has been with WMAL since August, 1942.

Junior Group To Be Entertained

Mrs. I. Ripley Johnson, executive secretary, Washington Branch of the English Speaking Union, will entertain members and friends of the E. S. U. Junior Group, at her Georgetown home at 1610 33d st. nw., tonight at 8 p. m.

Weather permitting the guests will be able to visit the gardens. Refreshmens will be served and two British films will be shown on Cambridge and the River Tyne.

Mrs. Ronne Speaks

Mrs. Finn Ronne, one of the first two women to step on the Antarctic Continent, was guest speaker at the University Women's Club dinner last evening. She told of her experiences on her recent 15-month Antarctic trip with her explorer-husband, Commander Ronne, USNR.

Mrs. Ronne, who kept the diary for her husband's expedition, along with the wife of another explorer on the junket, were the first members of their sex to set foot on the continent covering the South Pole.

Southall

MRS. ROY W. BAYLISS, JR., the former Miss Geraldine M. Gill, was married June 13 at the University of Virginia Chapel in Charlottesville, Va. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Philip E. Howard of Washington. The newly-weds will reside in Winchester, Va.

1000 Attend Founders' Day Celebration

Over 1000 guests attended the annual founders day celebration yesterday of the National Lutheran Home for the Aged, 18th and Douglas sts. ne.

A luncheon, sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary, was served to representatives from the District, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland. A service in the chapel followed the luncheon at which the Rev. Harry L. Saul, vice president of the board of trustees of the home and pastor of the First Lutheran Church in Carlisle, Pa., spoke on "Your Eyes Have Seen What I Have Done."

The Rev. George H. Berkheimer officiated at the laying of the cornerstone of the new Central Pennsylvania Synod building which will be completed next year. The building will increase the home's capacity from 154 guests to 210 guests.

During the afternoon, plants, cakes and needlework were on sale. The proceeds are for the Women's Auxiliary for work in the home.

Oak Furniture Can Have Two-Tone Silver-Gray Finish if Filler and Dye Are Mixed and Used Properly

DEAR ANNE: Can you tell me how to get a silver-gray finish on oak, a sort of two-toned effect? I have seen furniture like this and would like very much to refinish a table in this manner.
W. W. L., Bethesda, Md.

You can get this effect by first treating the cleaned surface of the wood with black wood dye (migrosine), then using a filler. Dissolve one ounce of the dye in a half gallon of water. If a dark gray is wanted, use less water. To get the color you want, try this liquid on a similar piece of wood (perhaps on the underside of the table) before putting it on the wood to be finished.

Apply with a sponge or camel's hair brush to the bare, sanded wood, allow to dry, then sand lightly. Next apply a filler made by mixing three parts natural paste-wood filler and one part white lead paste with equal parts of naptha or turpentine.

Apply filler to wood, allow to set 15 to 30 minutes, then wipe off excess across grain of wood. The idea is to leave some of the filler in the grain to obtain the silvery gray effect. Let it dry 24 hours, then apply a clear varnish finish. Use two coats, letting one dry thoroughly before applying the second. Sand each coat lightly with fine sandpaper wrapped around a block of wood.

DEAR ANNE: I am most anxious to obtain names and addresses of shops in the Washington area which specialize in handmade products, as I have been unable to find any in the telephone directory. Do most of these operate on a consignment basis? Mrs. F. R. S., Washington.

Yes, such shops—and their number is limited in this area—do operate on consignment. Telephone numbers of three that you might call to see whether they could handle the things you have in mind are: Sterling 8618; Falls Church 0952; and Ashton 5541.

DEAR ANNE: I have been using Tante Marie's French Cookbook with joy. Now I am stumped. Several recipes say to add unbeaten eggs to flour and blend and then beat for so many minutes. Then "Hands are the best tools for this operation." I can see how you knead with hands, but how on earth do you "beat" with your hands? See Rum Baba, page 255, and Brioche, page 251.
E. N. C., Silver Spring, Md.

An expert on foreign cookery tells me she believes the recipe simply means to beat by hand with a wire whip or similar implement, rather than use an electric beater or a rotary beater.

DEAR ANNE: Can you tell me where I can find a book giving instructions on pyrogravure? L. T., Frederick, Md.

Pyrogravure—the process of heat-engraving or applying designs with a hot tool to wood or cork—is described in full in a new book, "Three Hundred Projects for Hand Decorating," by Julienne Hallen (Homecrafts.) Instructions and designs for use on plaques, bookends, and many other articles are included. You should be able to find the volume in library or book shop.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

Your Figure

Just Reading Exercise No Way to Slim

By Ida Jean Kain

IF at first you don't succeed, try . . . another method. Now and again some plump lassie will complain that she can't figure out exercises, and gets all mixed up just reading them.

Perhaps that's the trouble . . . just reading them. The exercise instructions are meant to be acted out—they are not intended as mental gymnastics. I try to make them as error-proof as possible. To get the pull in exactly the right place, each exercise is acted out, and worded for action.

Sometimes things go awry, as with my "fast" hip slimmer. One newspaper accidentally left off the action part of the exercise, and the only instruction given was to lie face down on floor, stretched out to full extension. A reader sent in the clipping, explaining she thought it was a simple enough exercise but it wasn't slimming her hips very fast!

'Fast' Hip Slimmer

In case you're interested, here it is again. Lie face down on floor, head pillowed on folded arms, legs straight down. Action (to be effective, that word "action" must be taken literally):

All set? The exercise is to contract the hip muscles, raise one leg as high as possible without strain . . . and hold. Keep knee straight. The holding from that angle does the toning . . . hold to a slow count of 12, then repeat with the other leg and continue 6 times, alternating legs. This exercise restores tone to the big muscle padding the back of the hips.

The secret of exercise is not only to act it out, but to think of the measurement you are trying to slim and put the action there. Let's try one . . . say to discipline the midsection. A simple stretch will do the trick. Stand, feet apart, arms down at sides. Action: As you swing the right arm straight up, move the right leg back and touch toes to floor. That movement alone is merely arm and leg action. The streamlining is to extend the stretch, thinking "midsection"—then you automatically pull slim through the middle measurement, and get slim.

Good Posture

You can't go far wrong with an exercise if you keep in mind what measurement you are trying to improve and direct the pull there. And this holds true not only in calisthenics, but in everyday movements. Anything done in good posture, even sitting, is one form of exercise because the right muscles are being used and strengthened. Try pulling up snugly with that brace of middle muscles while sitting in perfect posture—back of hips against back of chair.

In turning an ordinary movement into a streamliner, again think in terms of your figure. If it's the middle measurement that needs slimming, then in reaching to put something up on a shelf, don't limit the stretch to the arm . . . S-t-r-e-t-c-h through the middle as you reach up.

'Annie' a Musical Everyone'll Like

By Richard L. Coe

"ANNIE GET YOUR GUN" is a swell musical—a picture everybody will enjoy.

There's very little to be said about the movie version of the stage hit now at the Palace, except that it has made the transformation happily. Betty Hutton is just fine as the tune-chocked sharpshooter, Annie Oakley, and Howard Keel makes a grand screen bow as the proud Frank Butler.

The real hero of Metro's movie remains Irving Berlin. His score, including "They Say That Falling in Love Is Wonderful," "Doin' What Comes Naturally," "The Girl That I Marry," "There's No Business Like Show Business" and "The Sun in the Morning," is as tuneful a parade as ever he wrote, and Betty and Keel do them up brown.

It's just over four years ago that Ethel Merman hit the Broadway jackpot with this yarn about Annie Oakley's marksmanship and romantic battle with Frank Butler, until her appearance the world's surest shot. Herbert anl Dorothy Fields spun an above-average book for the stage and Sidney Sheldon has stuck pretty close to the original. Naturally, you do watch Buffalo Bill's show get around more, and sets, people and animals are everywhere you look.

The difference between Ethel's and Betty's productions is in style. Ethel's was hard, Broadway-style sentiment, mocking and brassy but, at heart, sentimental 'neath the brass. Betty's is never hard or brassy; it's a sunny, country girl manner, not the least contemptuous of sentiment for its own sake.

And it's this approach which will make "Annie" popular with just that huge mass of moviegoers Hollewood seeks to please above all. Usually that's the most visionary aim of the moviemakers, a picture for everybody, but once in a great while the notion scores a bull's eye.

And while Annie is a juicy part, it's hard to think of anyone who could have done it as well as Betty has. She's kept her frantic grimacing in hand, and, when it's needed for "I'm an Indian," she makes the most of it. Keel, a tall, pleasant-looking fellow who was a very popular Curly in the stage "Oklahoma!," fits Butler's costumes with the same solid aplomb Ray Middleton had on the stage.

Keenan Wynn, J. Carroll Naish and Benay Venuta are among the top supporting players and Louis Calhern is the Buffalo Bill. The subplot involving lesser romance is out; so are a few of the songs ("Moonshine Lullaby," "Lost in His Arms," "Who Do You Love?") and "Doin' What Comes Naturally" has been cleaned up a bit. No harm is done and Metro should take a bow for a whopping good musical. This year it's made the two toppers—"On the Town" and now "Annie."

THERE'S AN UNINTENTIONAL laugh in the credits of "Annie." If your eyes are that good, you can read the classic safeguard: "The events, characters and firms depicted in this photoplay are fictitious. Any similarlity to actual persons, living or dead, or to actual firms, is purely coincidental." . . . Annie, Frank, Buffalo Bill and Queen Victoria, who gives Annie a medal, would be amused . . . How fictitious can you get?

"ANNIE GET YOUR GUN." M-G-M release produced by Arthur Freed. Screen play by Sidney Sheldon from the play by Herbert and Dorothy Fields. Music and lyrics by Irving Berlin. Musical numbers staged by Robert Alton. Photographed in Technicolor by Charles Rosher. Directed by George Sidney. At the Palace.

ARRIVALS: William Holden, Judy Holiday, Broderick Crawford and their "Born Yesterday" associates Statlering to make exteriors here for that comedy about a daft blonde and her Government larnin' . . . S. Sylvan Simon, another Columbia man, arrived yesterday to find that his latest comedy, "The Good Humor Man," starring Jack Carson, is due next week at the Warner . . . RKO's Director Edmund Grainger and Writer Kenneth Gamet are here to talk about a new one, "Flying Devil Dogs," with Marine Corps officers . . . And Rex Allen, Republic's new cowboy star, will be feted Friday.

LOCAL ACTORS are wanted by the McLean Summer Theater, which will open its season with "Tovarich" June 27 . . . Those interested should call Tommy Brent at Elmwood 510.

ALSO on the way is Judy Splinters, who seems to be a TV favorite . . . Judy will bring herself and her adopted sister, yclept Shirley Dinsdale, to both Hecht stores July 1.

AND IT IS WONDERFUL: Betty Hutton and Howard Keel sing "They Say It's Wonderful" in "Annie Get Your Gun" on the Palace screen. And, like that love they sing about, their movie's pretty wonderful, too

Carey and O'Hara Become Friends in Comanche Land

By Orval Hopkins
Post Reporter

THE horse opera at Keith's Theater is entitled "Comanche Territory" and I do not know how long they're going to be able to go on with these things.

You can't stick your nose into the West these days without you introduce something. First there was Colt .45; then there was Winchester 73 (unseen here yet); now there's this one. Each of these epics introduces something to the West. In "Comanche Territory," it's the Bowie knife.

You've seen all this before and I'm sorry to burden you with it again. I think the movies could use a bit more imagination, however. Story about the lady who introduced the cootch dance to the West perhaps, or about the one who introduced silk stockings to the West.

Anyway, "Comanche Territory," though filled with gorgeous Technicolor scenes taken, I assume, in southern Utah, and though rich in shots of the beautiful Maureen O'Hara and some almost equally beautiful horses, is pretty weary going. MacDonald Carey is the man who comes along and gets into a row with Miss O'Hara, causing her eyes to flash and her little foot to stamp. Carey is sort of a peeve of mine, and I don't mean to be unjust to him. I just think he isn't much of an actor.

The gods know, however, that Carey hasn't much to work with in this one. The script at no time gets up on its feet, remaining throughout a pedestrian tale of some people trying to cheat the Comanche Indians out of the silver lying under their lands.

Will Geer, looking for all the world like his old Jeeter Lester, worries his role manfully, but is unable to make much headway with it. This is the fault of the writers, Oscar Brodney and Lewis Meltzer.

A "Sportscope" was flashed on the screen and a hopeful young fan near me hissed fervently, "I hope it's baseball." The boy ought to be informed here and now that "Sportscopes," or whatever, are never about baseball, or football, or golf, or anything anybody wants to know about. They're always about water skiing or dog training or glider flying. This one's about polo. I'm sure it's very good in its way.

Another short at Keith's is about rescue crews and how they operate. It is very interesting and highly informative. The narators in both these, however, Dwight Weist and Andre Baruch, feel called on to keep their voices at fever pitch at all times. This disturbs me, and I'm sure it doesn't bother anybody else in the world.

The newsreel, as it doubtless has for the past 30-odd years, includes some shots of the graduation at West Point. They could save everybody a lot of time and expense by simply hauling out last year's clip on the graduation and running it all over again. Or they could skip the whole thing, maybe.

"COMANCHE TERRITORY." Universal-International release produced by Leonard Goldstein. Screen play by Oscar Brodney and Lewis Meltzer. Photographed in Technicolor by Maury Gertsman. Directed by George Sherman. At Keith's.

Salute to the Sesqui

Cross Roaders Dig 60 Years Back for a Congress Farce

THE CROSS ROADS Theater, that citronella citadel of the Virginia amateurs, has started its fourteenth summer by leafing back 60 years for a farce about a Texas Congressman in Washington.

This is Charles Hoyt's "A Texas Steer," and it just goes to show that time doesn't change many things after all. Presumably audiences of the '90s also discovered that election years, visitors from the home district and Capital social-climbing were Congressional headaches, as they are today.

To an indoctrinated theatergoer, the interest at the Bailey's Cross Roads red barn centers on the group's intention to observe the Washington Sesqui year by digging up plays of the nether-past, not the run of usual summer favorites from "Angel Street" to "Dear Ruth." It's interesting to see what our forebears laughed at or enjoyed, and instructive to see how even the writing of farces has taken on a slickness not evident in "A Texas Steer." No doubt the mechanics of modern comedies also will be starkly evident a couple of generations in the future. Or, for that matter, next season.

The acting level at the Virginia barn is unabashedly amateur and consequently less embarrassing than more pretentious groups. The players are out for a good time, and when audiences join them in letting down to a give and take level, the Cross Roaders are on their proper level.

Among the leads you'll find William P. Leggate as the Congressman, Edith Aymar as his wife and Edythe Wagner as their daughter. Frances Goodrow has a good scene as "Dixie Style, an orphan from Indiana," and Ethel Casey brings an easy charm to a role patently dragged in for the playwright's convenience, important to the framework, nonessential to the plot, which seems to be how Hoyt wrote his farces.

Bob Huey, George Lytle, Bernard Gilmore, Robert C. Hogan, John Stanley and Patrick Collins, jr., are among the other players of Director Vera Mowry's cast.

Next on the bill is another look back—"Peck's Bad Boy."

D. C. Laundry Man Sues Circus for Breach of Contract

Hartford, Conn., June 14 (AP).—Attorneys for Cal Calvaga, 40, of 3611 Jenifer st. nw., Washington, D. C., demanded $250,000 in a breach-of-contract suit filed here yesterday against the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus.

Calvagna charged the circus with breaking a contract in August, 1948, under which he agreed to do all the circus laundry and dry cleaning for $25,000 a season. He said he designed and installed a complete cleaning plant in a pullman car, at a cost of $21,250. Before terminating the contract, the circus had paid him only $5685, he said.

The contract was entered in Februrary, 1948, for three years with extensions totalling 10 years, the papers stated.

Prince Georges 'Antis' Stage Voting Coup

Anti-administration forces took complete charge of last night's organization meeting of the Citizens Committee for Good Government in Prince Georges County through a parliamentary ruling.

Temporary Chairman William R. Turner permitted only card-carrying, paid-up members of the new committee to vote on adoption of bylaws for the board of directors at the meeting, held in the county service building at Hyattsville.

Enrollment of members was cut off promptly at 8 p. m., when the meeting was called to order. Turner also refused to recess the meeting to allow nonmembers to enroll before voting began.

About 90 of the 175 persons attending were eligible to participate under the chair's ruling, which was supported by a 76-13 vote among the card-carrying members. The eligible members included a sizable representation of Republican leaders and anti-Administration Democrats.

Only a handful of county "organization" Democrats had secured credentials before the 8 o'clock deadline.

As the meeting adjourned, Walter F. Mulligan, veteran president of the County Civic Federation and one of the leaders in the formation of the new group, declared:

"My friends in the county machine, don't go away disgruntled. We have only done to you what you would have done to us."

Named to the board of directors were Turner, Mulligan, Robert Balkam, of Radiant Valley; Mrs. Reuben Bogdanoff, of Hampshire Knolls; Theodore L. Miazga, of Riverdale; Mrs. Brendan O'Dwyer of Landover Hills; John H. Shepherd, of Defense Heights, and Mrs. Charles P. Saylor, of Hyattsville.

Senior, Junior High School Graduate 3492

By Perry Rohland—The Washington Post

WITH CLASSMATES—Gladys Neeley, 15-year-old leukemia victim, absent from classes for 12 weeks, returned to Stuart Junior High School yesterday to receive her diploma with 142 classmates. She remained seated in the audience during the presentation. Boise L. Bristor, representing the Board of Education, hands Gladys her diploma, as her mother, Mrs. Doris Marie Neeley, of 602 Maryland ave. ne., looks on with pride

Diplomas were presented to 3492 junior and senior high school students yesterday in exercises at 20 of the city's public schools.

Thirty veterans completed their high-school education under an accelerated program and were graduated from the Veterans Center. The students, who ranged in age from 17 to 30, were the last of more than 4000 former GI's to attend the school. The Board of Education has ordered the center at McKinley High School closed because of dropping enrollments.

Dunbar High School graduated a senior class of 386 and boasted that more than 75 percent will go on to college.

303 Graduate at Wilson

At Woodrow Wilson High School 303 students received diplomas but for most of these students graduation merely marks a pause in their education. Nearly eight out of every ten will go on to college.

The Rev. L. Ralph Tabor, pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church, gave the invocation at the Coolidge High School graduation and watched his daughter, Lois, receive her diploma. She was one of a class of 260 students.

Two students from McKinley High School who completed their education in wheel chairs were among the 285 students who graduated. John Whelan, who went all the way through high school while confined to a chair, won a scholarship to the Corcoran Art School. The other student was Eugene Wiles, who fractured both legs in a fall last January from the catwalk of the auditorium.

Leukemia Victim Graduates

Miss Virginia Willis, retiring teacher of English at McKinley, sat on the platform with the graduates.

At Stuart Junior High School, 15-year-old Gladys Neely, a victim of leukemia, graduated with the rest of her class. Two of her fellow students carried her from her home at 602 Maryland ave. ne. to the school. She was one of 142 students to receive diplomas.

Hine, 92 students; Jefferson, 75; Kramer, 310; Langley, 122; Macfarland, 137; Paul, 231; Burdick, 36; Chamberlain, 38; Banneker, 195; Browne, 140; Garnet-Patterson, 174; Miller, 157; Randall, 240; Terrell, 139.

Five Prince Georges schools holding graduation exercises yesterday were:

Surrattsville, 42 graduates; Gwynn Park, 31; Laurel, 55; Greenbelt, 89; Maryland Park, 128.

Schools with exercises today are: Wilson Teachers College, 8:30 p. m. Western, 4:30 p.m.; Deal, 2:30 p.m.; Eliot, 2 p.m.; Gordon, 2 p.m.; Taft, 2 p.m.; Miner Teachers College, 10:30 a.m.; Veterans High School Center for Negro students, 8 p.m.; Francis, 10 a.m.; Phelps, 8 p.m.

The Lakeland High School will hold graduation exercises at 8:15 p.m. at the Fairmont Heights Elementary School.

School Vacation to Start In D. C., Prince Georges

School's out today for 92,000 District public school children and 25,000 in Prince Georges County.

Pupils will shut their books and desks for the last time until classes resume September 1.

The summer holiday began at the close of school yesterday for children in Arlington and Alexandria. Montgomery County students will not finish until noon Friday.

Schools in Fairfax and Falls Church and parochial schools in the Catholic Archdiocese of Washington closed last Friday.

Columbus U. Law School

Twenty-eight students received law degrees and 95 were granted degrees in accountancy by the Columbus University Law School in exercises last night at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium. William E. Leahy, president of the University, presided and George E. Herring, chairman of the board of trustees, presented diplomas. The commencement address was given by Justin Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters and former associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals.

Abbott Art School

Twenty-nine students who have completed courses in advertising illustration last night received certificates from Anne Fuller Abbott, director of the Abbott Art School. The ceremony was held at 8 p. m. in the garden of the Washington Arts Club. Scholarships to the school were presented to Betty Hyman of Roosevelt High School and Shirley Chapman, Washington and Lee High School, Arlington.

Terrell Law School

Seventeen students received law degrees last night at the 14th annual commencement held by the Terrell Law School. Melvin D. Hildreth, newly elected president of the school, conferred the degrees at the exercises held here at Banneker Junior High School. The commencement address was delivered by Municipal Court Judge Ellen K. Raedy.

GAO to Clarify Promotions

yesterday opposed the three House-approved "economy" riders to the general budget bill as "unworkable, unfair, and unsound, and not in the interest of true economy."

He told the Senate Appropriations Committee that the Taber-Thomas and Jensen riders would mean arbitrary dismissal of many highly qualified workers which would result in a loss of operating efficiency that would offset any salary saving. He also foresaw the increased use of military people in civilian jobs under the riders.

The rider to require employes to take annual leave this year as they earn it or else lose it was denounced by Steward as a "definite repudiation of a recognized obligation of the Government to its employes." He explained that leave was accumulated during the war at the insistence of the Government and not on the wish of the employes.

The NFFE leader urged Congress to allow employes who have 30 or more years of service and who are laid off in reductions of force to be retired on full annuities regardless of age. He explained this was allowed under the 1932 Economy Act.

RETIREMENT: Senate-House conferees are reported ready to drop the Williams amendment to the bill to help employes who retired prior to April 1, 1948. The controversial amendment would reduce pensions to persons whose annuities are based on low salaries.

Senate conferees are Senators Humphrey (D., Minn.), Frear (D., Del.), and Langer (R., N. Dak.). House conferees are Chairman Murray (D., Tenn.) and Representatives Thornberry (D., Tex.) and Rees (R., Kans.).

NOTES: The Federal Career Employes Association will meet at 8 p. m. Friday in the Interior Department auditorium to hear Representative John McSweeney (D., Ohio) discuss job security in Government. You're invited. . . . Treasury's NFFE local has elected Joe Webb, Thelma Snyder and Irving Lehman as delegates to the Union's September convention. Alternates are Bernice Collins, James W. Kemper, Margaret Abernathy, John A. Long and Grace Johnson. . . . The Federal Personnel Council today will try again at agreeing on a stiffer hot weather policy for Government workers.

Folger Again Heads District Red Cross

J. Clifford Folger yesterday was reelected for the eighth straight year as chairman of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross.

At the same time, Folger delivered his annual report on chapter activities at the annual meeting in Walsh House, 2020 Massachusetts ave. nw.

The Washington Regional Blood Center, he reported, has met the total needs of 24 hospitals in 17 counties in Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia; the total needs of 15 hospitals in the District and the emergency needs of the remaining five hospitals.

The total of 3190 pints collected in May was 500 more than that collected in any previous month since the center opened in 1948. However, Folger said, the collection will have to reach 5000 pints per month to meet the total needs.

Workers Trained

Because of the anticipated demands of civilian defense plans, he went on, the chapter increased the appropriation to train large numbers of first aid workers.

The chapter in the past year has processed an average of 1800 cases monthly and spent $175,000 in carrying out its obligations to servicemen, veterans and their families.

The chapter's nursing service gave out more certificates for "Mother and Baby Care" instructions than any other chapter in the country.

Mrs. David E. Finley, chairman of volunteer services, reported that 3300 volunteers served a total of 276,000 hours in the past 11 months.

Officers Chosen

Officers reelected to serve with Folger were Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman emeritus; Wayne Chatfield, Taylor, vice chairman; Joseph C. Grew, vice chairman; Mrs. Edward Fay, vice chairman; John Spalding Flannery, counselor; Frederick P. H. Siddons, treasurer (for the tenth year); Hans W. Ireland, and Kenneth Birgfeld, assistant treasurer; Arthur Hellen, secretary and Nat C. Wilson, manager.

New members elected to the executive committee were Daniel W. Bell, president of the American Security & Trust Co., and Dr. Montgomery Blair, director of Children's Hospital.

Newly elected to the board of directors were Secretary of the Army Frank Pace; James E. Webb, Undersecretary of State; Paul Griffith, Assistant Secretary of Defense; John R. Steelman, assistant to President Truman; Spencer Love and Richard P. Dunn.

States Rights Session Wars On Trumanites

Montgomery, Ala., June 14 (AP).—Alabama States Righters dedicated themselves today to a political crusade to preserve racial segregation in the South.

Without a dissenting vote, upwards of 100 anti-Truman Democrats voted at a state-wide rally to carry on a "no retreat, no surrender" battle against the Truman Administration in 1952.

The rally was called in protest against recent Supreme Court decisions outlawing segregation on railroad dining cars and at the University of Oklahoma, and ordering the University of Texas to admit a Negro.

Delegates to the informal meeting shouted approval to a resolution demanding the right to withhold Alabama's 11 electoral votes from the national party nominee again two years from now just as the State did in 1948.

The resolution pledged an unending fight against the Truman civil rights program which touched off the revolt against the national party two years ago.

Delegates also voted to set up a new State-wide organization reaching down to the county level.

In another resolution the States Righters called on members of the white and Negro races alike to "refrain from words or deeds which might precipitate friction between the races" in the days and months ahead.

Action came after speakers denounced the Supreme Court rulings and advocated unified political activity as the only way to preserve Southern traditions.

Suit Begun Over Site For New Store

Trial of a $250,000 civil damage suit over ownership of a portion of the site for the Hecht Co.'s proposed Arlington store, was begun yesterday in Arlington Circuit Court.

Attorneys spent the day discussing admissibility of evidence. They agreed the preliminary talks would continue today, and that a jury probably would not be called until Friday.

The Hecht Co., and 10 other persons and corporations with an interest in the property, are defendants in the suit, and are represented by attorneys James H. Simmonds, Lawrence Douglas, and Louis Denit.

Plaintiffs George W. Beall, and William Herbert Beall are represented by Warren Miller and Edgar Pumphrey. The Bealls claim the 6½ acres of the 18-acre site should have reverted to them at the time of their father's death in 1949, under the terms of their grandfather's will.

The case is being tried before Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy.

Walter Winchell —In New York

New Yorkers Are Talking About . . .

Irving Berlin's score for "Call Me Madam," starring Ethel Merman. They say it tops "Annie Get Your Gun" for show-stoppers . . . The reason M. Todd has 92% of "Peep Show": He couldn't get his best friends to risk investing in it . . . The ads for "Asphalt Jungle," which have W. R. Burnett exclaiming: "Extraordinary!" He merely wrote the original book . . . "The Wiseguy Set," which will lay odds that "nothing'll ever come of" the Federal probe into gambling. (So will some Feds) . . . The rumor that when (and if) Casey Stengel steps down, DiMaggio will inherit the Yanks managership . . . The reports from Paree about Kay Thompson's click. They went wild over her classic, "Poor Suzette" . . . Ex-Congressman Ham Fish's ego in an interview: "I would just as soon beat a man like Eisenhower as any other candidate!" . . . The mystery about What Happened to 5 Percenter James V. Hunt? . . . The man responsible for most of the singing commercials—ad exec. Myron Mahler . . . The Father's Day page ads in The New Yorker and other slicks featuring the photo of famed bachelor Lucius Beebe.

The Government's deficit last year of 5½ billion while 3 American firms made that much in profits the same year. They include Standard Oil, DuPont and Gen'l Motors . . . The big fluff in last Sabbath's Dick Tracy when Flintheart misquoted Shakespeare. Quoth he: "Alas, poor Yorick, I knew him well." There is no "well" in the Bard's quote. The line in Act V. Scene 1 reads: "Alas, poor Yorick! I knew him, Horatio" . . . The way the talent of 4 stars is wasted in the dulloloid called "Please Believe Me" . . . The legend that Sinatra, Crosby, Eckstine & Co. are the chief best-sellers on the recording lists—when the disc that's been on them all since it was released 219 weeks ago is Jose Iturbi's "Polonaise."

The only news bureau over at the United Nations press shack which keeps its doors padlocked (almost the size of the door)—the Tass News outfit . . . The next new mag, "True Divorce Cases" . . . Oscar Dystel succeeding George Davis as managing editor at Flair . . . The N. Y. Enquirer becoming a daily about New Year's? . . . The next kiddie toy due on the market: Flying Saucers at $1 each . . . The new hit song, "Blind Date" (as recorded by Hope and Whiting), which was suggested by the wife of S. Robins, who wrote it as "our song" . . . The way NBC interrupted the National Golf Open (when it was tied at the 14th hole) with a Hopalong Cassidy commercial. The last time that situation came up (over at ABC) they cancelled their Ford commersh! . . . Equity's report that only 8 percent of their actor members earned "a living wage."

The Jackie Robinson rumor making the rounds again. That he will be sold to the Cubs before season's end . . . Ed Weiner shelving his disc jockey program in 3 weeks to resume his public relations business. His new big accounts are Bop City, Louis Armstrong and Dick Brown of "Stop the Music" . . . Rose Murphy, the song star, revealing how she hit upon her trademark "Chee-Chee," which critics applauded as a new style. "New style, ha!" she said. "I say chee-chee when I forget the words" . . . The new book Viking is readying on well-known Nazis now active in German civil administration . . . Colleen Townsend going through with her announcement: That she will forsake Hollywood for the pulpit. Her only flicker will be "Great Discovery," now filmed at Video Studios, a nonprofit religious theme for churches and schools . . . Showgirl Geene Courtney, who averages $400 weekly playing "straight" for star comics on teevy.

Howard Hughes' intimates being concerned over his plan to fly his giant plane (which the Senate probed on the money the Gov't paid for it) around the world . . . The 8 to 5 odds on Governor Warren over Jimmy Roosevelt . . . The White House insiders who are convinced someone "high" in the Administration is feeding the info to McCarthy. They admit there's a powerful leak somewhere. Could it be at the Dept. of State? . . . The gal who was pushed out of a midtown hotel window last week. She landed on the next floor extension, not too hurt. The papers muffed it . . . The manager of an all-night eatery in the 50s, who was carried out of his own place a victim of ptomaine. Last year the same thing happened to the chef! . . . Danny Thomas' return to the Riviera. Funny fella.

What-the-Rich-Do-for-Excitement: Montgomery Hare of the Social Register, who has organized a troupe to tour in "Miracle" plays. To get the masses interested in religion . . . The theme of Vernon Duke's new musical, "Wedding Day," which is the inside story of the marriage crash of two of his intimates. A top fashion photographer and his actress wife . . . The peculiar cancer fund which received $640,000 from the gullible public and "spent" $495,000 for "administration and expenses" . . . Give your cancer donations to the Runyon Fund and make sure you aren't being gypped. We never deduct anything at any time! . . . The mag publisher and another publishing exec who are competing for M. Dietrich's favors.

J. Arthur Rank's new film, "They Were Not Divided," which he confides was filmed to counteract dangerous anti-American feeling sweeping through England . . . The pressure from highups to keep informer Elizabeth Bentley, ex-Commuhist, from getting a promised job in the Justice Dept. . . . Morton Downey getting his pay of $2500 for not appearing on the Anchor Hocking Glass teevy program. After he was signed for it, someone recalled he's a big cog in Coca-Cola, which doesn't use their bottles . . . The unpublished Rodgers and Hart song, "Wait Till You See Her," which MGM has purchased for a musical . . . The gab about F. Erickson being held on only $10,000 bail while his minor henchman, Harry Richards, sweats it out in the hoosegow under $100,000 bail.

The Drama Desk group of drama editors here, who sat with open mouths as newcomers to Broadway show-producing explained how they plan to promote financial backing of shows. One of them is on relief—another did 2 years in the clink for fraud . . . Junior Standish of "Gents Prefer Blondes," whose real name is Jean Arthur. And Jean Arthur, the "Peter Pan" star, whose real name is Gladys Greene . . . Denise Darcel, who only recently got "famous" via the "Battleground" picture, who is now trying to stop a stripper at Minsky's in Chicago from calling herself Denise Darnell . . . And the toughest place to book a lecture tour being Connecticut since the Adler-Draper libel suit.

WISHING WELL—

Decomposed Body Found At Riverdale

A badly-decomposed body was found yesterday in a thicket near a private aircraft landing field in Riverdale, Md.

The unclothed body, which Maryland State Police estimated had been hidden as long as two months, was in such condition investigators were unable immediately to determine sex or race.

State Trooper William R. Crist said it was too early to tell whether the body showed any bullet holes, stab wounds or other evidence of foul play.

Trooper Crist reported only these scanty means of identification at the scene: an old shirt and some underwear lying nearby; a broad, gold wedding band on the body's left hand, and a set of false teeth near the thicket. Crist said the wedding band and short haircut might indicate the victim was a man.

The body was discovered about 3 p. m. yesterday, 200 feet from the northern end of the airstrip owned by the Engineering and Research Corp in Riverdale.

It was found by two Hyattesville High School boys, Bruce Hetherington, 17, of 4505 Guilford rd. and James Long, 16, of 7014 Wake Forest dr., both College Park. They promptly notified State Police at College Park.

Fin, Feathers Club Loses Its Charter

Judge Charles F. McLaughlin of District Court yesterday revoked the charter of the Fin and Feathers Social Club, Inc., 1016 14th st. nw.

He instructed the jury in the case to find that the organization "misused and abused" its charter privileges and then ordered the United States Attorney to prepare the revocation order.

He made his ruling after Assistant United States Attorneys Bruce Sundlun and Stafford Grady presented two undercover military policemen who said that on three occasions they were served drinks at the club.

Club officers said that the organization was formed to promote fellowship among sportsmen and to hold fishing and hunting excursions.

Judge McLaughlin commented that the club never did hold such excursions from the time it was formed in February until it stopped its activities as an after-hours club recently.

He said there was nothing that would possibly qualify the club as a beneficial, charitable, scientific, religious or missionary club, as required by the statute, nor was it to promote mutual improvement or the arts.

He said that it was a subterfuge to violate liquor laws and really operated as a nightclub. If it were musical, he said, it was only because it had a dance orchestra. Its only literary activity was evidenced by a few sports magazines, he declared.

The Fin and Feathers is the eighth after-hours club ordered out of business in a drive by law-enforcement authorities.

Truman to Lay Courthouse Cornerstone

A gala program is being worked up for the June 27 cornerstone-laying ceremony for the consolidated Federal courthouse here, now under construction at C st. and John Marshall pl., nw.

President Truman will lay the stone with a silver trowel and almost the entire judiciary, as well as numerous other dignitaries will attend.

Placed in the cornerstone will be numerous documents, photographs and a copy of each of the daily Washington newspapers.

At a press conference yesterday, Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws of District Court estimated that the building will be completed late in 1951 or early in 1952. He said that it will be, perhaps, the finest structure of its kind in the Nation.

Offices of the United States Commissioner, the United States Marshal, the District Court and the United States Court of Appeals will be in the new building.

It will contain such innovation asbedrooms for jurors and secluded studies for people with court business.

Before Your Marry . . .

Importance of Charac ter Emphasized

This is the fourth of six articles condensed from the recent book, "Before You Marry," published by Associated Press. Today's chapter emphasizes the importance of fully understanding the character of the person you think you will marry.

Dr. Duvall has been counselor on marriage and family relations for more than 20 years. He has been professor of social science and religion at George Williams College, in Chicago, since 1934.

By Sylvanus M. Duvall

CHAPTER FOUR

To some people a concern for character may sound a little on the pious side.

They may feel either that character is not too important, or that they can "take care of themselves" at this point.

But to the girl who is married to an irresponsible gambler, or who is fleeing across the country with a man wanted by the police; to the man whose business career and social standing have been ruined by an unscrupulous wife, the matter of character cannot be so easily dismissed.

Crooks do not go around with labels on, ringing a bell. They look, talk, and appear like anyone else. Some of them are unusually beautiful, charming and lovable.

When you select a marriage mate you are choosing far more than a bed-fellow and companion for your recreation. You are selecting a partner in a permanent building enterprise who will be among other things:

1. The other parent of your children. This requires character personality and the intelligence necessary to guide and direct the development of growing children.

2. One who will have rather complete access to your bank account and credit. Such a trust requires not only honesty, but enough discipline to keep from squandering needed family resources for personal whims.

3. Even more important, that person will have intimate access to you; your innermost thoughts and feelings, your hopes and plans, your ambitions and aspirations. By encouraging you when you need it most, or by lending a hand or dragging his feet when the going gets tough, he may be able to make or break you.

Are you both sufficiently truthful and reliable to make possible good relationships with each other and with your associates?

Few people tell the whole truth all the time. Little lies, told for courtesy's sake or to avoid unnecessary trouble with irrational people, are part of the social lubrication which makes human relationships easier.

Importance of Frankness

Yet in our kind of world, life cannot go on without a considerable degree of truthfulness and reliability. We must be able to depend upon the promises and the reliable services of others. Married life is essentially a sharing, in part, by talking things over. How can we share unless we can be reasonably sure that what we share is real?

Clinical experience indicates that frankness and honesty are among the most important elements of any relationship.

Lying indicates personality disturbances.

Excessive lying is a confession that you cannot handle your problems.

Do you both have a kindly, humane attitude toward other people?

Everyone in the office was surprised when Jim broke his engagement with Doris. For Doris was beautiful, brilliant and attractive. She was the kind of girl, it seemed, anyone would be glad to marry.

Yet Jim had good reasons for his decision. He began to notice that Doris was unpleasant and discourteous to many people. She would turn on the charm for him, but she was consistently mean to the newsboy, the waitress and the attendant at the gas station.

Jim wisely saw that if they married she would, in time, treat him (and their children) the same way. He just did not want any.

The person who harbors hatreds and grudges against others or who feels that other people are always giving him a dirty deal, is a poor marriage risk.

Prejudice against members of other racial groups is often an expression of personality difficulties which should cause one to stop, look and listen.

Even at best, those who live in the intimacy of marriage will hurt each other. A basic gentleness and kindness toward others is an essential which you should be sure about before you marry.

D'You Have Color?

Miss Hennock Asks A Simple Question

By Tex McCrary and Jinx Falkenburg

"DO YOU have color now?"

That was the question fired by Freda Hennock at a distinguished scientist during recent hearings before the F. C. C.—up to that point, questions asked by other commissioners had been highly technical, answers by the scientist had been couched in scientific language which baffled reporters and spectators. That was before Frieda asked a simple question. As the scientist blinked and took a deep breath, and reporters woke up, Frieda politely but firmly repeated her question:

Miss Hennock

"All I want to know is—do you have color now?"

Emphasis was on the word "now." The scientist tried hard to phrase a simple answer to a simple question—he judged that a color tube could be produced in 30 days. Frieda got very excited, so did everybody else present—immediately the scientist began to hedge . . . realizing that he had touched off another burst of over-optimism. Frieda squared away and bored in again:

"How soon can I get a television set with that color tube in it?"

The scientist said an experimental model of the color television receiving set could be built for the commissioner in, say, about . . .

"No! Not for me—I want to buy one for my sister, and I want to buy it in a department store in New York City. How soon?"

From Poland at 4

AND that's a sample of cross-examination by a lady lawyer who was the only woman and the only Democrat in the conservative firm of Choate, Mitchell & Ely—where tea is served every afternoon at four:

"Mind you, I wasn't a 'born lawyer.' I landed in this country from Poland when I was four years old. By the time I was old enough to go to college in Brooklyn, on registration day I found that the law school was the only one that had any good courses left. Teaching was already crowded with women—medicine was impossible—and so, that left law.

Frakly, we felt Frieda was underplaying her interest in law; but in her new job, she pulls no punches: "I believe electronic energy is second only to atomic energy . . . and that television is as important an invention as the printing press.

"And television is no luxury item, either—that's what I meant by telling that scientist I wanted to be able to buy color television in a department store. When I get in a taxicab and the driver tells me he's spent his last nickel on a television set, that means something to me. 'Go take a look at the grass roots as I have—visit the 'wrong side of the tracks'—you'll see television aerials popping up on every part of the skyline. The people who can't afford the theater and the nightclubs turn to television, and it's anything but a luxury."

She agreed with our pet theory: automobiles and movies took people out of their homes, television will put them back—and that's a revolution.

'Why the Freeze?'

"AND now please put this down the way I want to say it: There are only a hundred-odd television stations in operation now—there ought to be 2000! Why the freeze? Because we have discovered flaws in our present television standards, and we don't want to weave any further errors into the system. We are going to set new standards for television, and we are going to provide room for those 2000 stations. First, we must decide the color question, because it may in turn affect the standards we adopt. I, personally, think color is better than black and white right this minute—it conveys much more—but setting its standards is the most difficult problem before the commission today.

"And you must remember that the value of television, or radio, regardless of technical perfection, can be measured only in terms of what they bring to the public. If the programs are no good, neither is the system!"

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Bill's Southern Accent Fails to Pass Muster

A State society which holds a fried chicken dinner at so much per plate is hardly news.

But the Florida State Society with an absolutely free, no cost, on-the-house, don't-pay-a-cent chicken dinner announcement positively makes me drool.

Bernard N. Siegel, who came North with his brother, Irvin L., to build the huge Food Fair grocery chain of Greater Washington, decided he'd like to invite fellow Floridians out to his Maryland farm for some fried chicken on Saturday, the 24th.

"How many do you suppose would care to come?" he asked society officials.

"For free?" they answered in amazement. "You'd probably have to feed 300 people."

"Good," said Siegel. "Invite them all."

Now, I yield to no man in my capacity for eating fried chicken. And my mother's "two weeks" in Florida invariably start in November and end in April. So I thought I ought to qualify for one of those invitations.

But Utha Gray Smith (Temple 6128) just laughed at my phony southern accent, and ruled me out.

"All members of the Florida State Society are welcome," she said, "and nonmember Floridians who'd like to join may call me and make arrangements. What's more, your mother will be considered a Floridian by adoption. But you're barred."

A fine thing. My mother can make her own fried chicken if she likes, but I can't. And I'm not letting this matter drop without a fight. I know a guy who has a friend who mows the lawn for this fellow Smathers. So there!

EDDIE

PERSONAL NOTES

Lois Hawk, 2311 N. 11th st., Arlington, Va.: Now that you mention it, I'm willing to concede that Eddie Yost probably looks better from the grandstand than the bleachers. My only reason for suggesting the bleachers was that the girl who wrote the letter said she didn't want to get too close to handsome men. But any way you look at him, Eddie is still a nice looking lad. Especially when he raps out those hits in the clutch.

MISCELLANY

Street scene: The pretty girl in blue jeans who skims expertly through downtown traffic on the motorcycle bearing Virginia tag 3780 . . . Herb Harris of 1121 N. Kensington st., Arlington, Va., tells me: "After 11 years of thinking that there's security in working for Uncle Sam, I'm somewhat disillusioned. I'm going back to Florida, and will have to be a mail-edition District Liner from now on" . . . Tommy Brent confides that as soon as he lays hands on a second-hand piano, his Straw Hat Players of McLean, Va., will be ready for 12 weeks of summer stock, starting on the 27th of this month . . . And Scott Kirkpatrick reminds me that the Watergate Grand Opera Festival leads off with "Madame Butterfly" tonight at 8:20 . . . Pet Peeve of Ridgely Moise, jr., of 1426 21st st. nw. is the radio announcer who insists on talking about his sponsor's wonderful three-piece bedroom "soots." District Liner Moise wonders if a three-piece bedroom suit would be: pajama tops, pajama bottoms, and a vest . . . Mrs. Edward W. Wootton of McLean, Va., says that if Veep Barkley needs a little practice in kissing "queens," he can sharpen up his technique at the California Centennial Ball Saturday night at the Statler. Displaced Californians interested in attending may call Mrs. Clair Engle on Decatur 9119 . . . Typical of the stout-hearted folks who won't let illnesses stop them is Charles G. Horton of Glenn Dale Sanatorium, Glenn Dale, Md. Unable to do most types of work, Charlie has built up a brisk business making leather billfolds, and key and cigarette cases, complete with hand-tooled personalized initials. His work is sterilized before leaving the sanatorium—and might make a fine gift for Dad . . . The "pedal pushers" worn by the Capitol Theater's popular Sam Jack Kaufman when the musicians play baseball may be very practical, as Sam Jack contends; but I still say he looks like he got caught in the rain while wearing a $9.95 suit.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four darling 6-week-old kittens." (Woodley 7484.)

"Two toy bulldogs, female, 7 months old; their mother was full bred." (Tuckerman 1152 after 6 p. m.)

"Year-old mother cat, good mouser, and her two 10-week-old kittens; we're leaving town." (Wisconsin 6798.)

"Two male rabbits, 4 months old; will deliver." (Temple 3867.)

"Two 6-week-old kittens." (Falls Church 4399.)

"Gentle 3-year-old short-haired dog; also housebroken 1-year-old dog, part toy collie." (Tower 5688 after 6 p. m.)

"Handsome, well-behaved 1-year-old tomcat." (Axminster 5628.)

"Very adorable, very smart 10-week-old female puppy." (Metropolitan 1257.)

"Ten-week-old black kitten." (Falls Church 1732.)

SHE WAS SERIOUS, TOO

Mrs. Arthur E. Beach of 4609 30th st. nw. was waiting her turn at the grocer's check stand when she heard the woman ahead of her ask the clerk:

"The milk strike won't affect the delivery of cream, will it?"

Navy Itches to Give Missile Data

By Drew Pearson

The Navy is itching to rip the "top secret" label from the most revolutionary weapon since the atomic bomb—the guided missile.

Pearson

Reason for the Navy's itchy fingers is that it thinks guided missiles may make the big bomber as obsolete as the dodo.

Here are some of the facts that can be revealed without giving aid and comfort to the enemy:

1. The guided missile is guided unerringly to the target by radar echoes. If, for instance, a missile is fired 5 miles to one side of the target, it will automatically change its course while in the air and hit the target. The exact distance a homing missile will change its course remains a military secret; but the effect is that of a magnet drawing a bullet to the target. It cannot miss.

2. The joint chiefs of staff, including sober, cautious Gen. Omar Bradley, were so impressed by homing missiles they persuaded reluctant Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson to earmark millions for mass experimentation and production. Johnson has finally approved an order.

3. The Navy in its new construction program now before Congress proposes two cruisers and a number of small vessels and submarines be converted into guided-missile carriers.

4. The Navy has developed antisubmarine and antiship missiles that will dive under water and speed toward a fast-moving ship. This may make the transportation of troops in wartime almost impossible.

5. It will also be fairly easy to shoot down invading airplanes. Comdr. L. P. Ramage, of the Navy's guided-missile research, reported to the Secretary of the Navy: "The highest priority goes to those missiles whose targets will be hostile aircraft. The pendulum swings one way and then the other. The guided missile shows promise of achieving a quantum jump in the effectiveness of weapons available to a task force against the bomber. Success is inevitable."

The Navy's "Lark"

The only missile that can be described in print is called the Lark, of which the Navy has manufactured and tested approximately 200. Originally developed as a counter-weapon to the Jap Kamikaze, the Lark has two liquid rocket engines, uses acid and aniline fuel, and can operate outside the dense oxygen layer of the earth's atmosphere.

When the Lark nears the target, a second and independent electronic system automatically picks up the target and guides the missile to it. A proximity fuse sets off the bomb. The Lark weighs 1200 pounds and is 15 feet long. It has two pairs of wings at right angles.

It is a healthy fact that the Air Force, instead of bucking a Navy development that may put big bombers out of business, is giving 100 percent cooperation to the Navy. In fact, the Air Force was so impressed with the Lark, it purchased 82 from the Navy. It also went to bat with Secretary Johnson in demanding that funds be allocated for further developments.

Basing-Point Lobby

No relation to the Wisconsin Senator, McCarthy is a graduate of Paul McNutt's old Indiana machine, and is now Washington lobbyist for some of the railroads that would profit by more cross-hauls under the basing-point bill.

McCarthy's infectious good humor helped to line up such Democratic bigwigs as Senator Francis Myers of Pennsylvania, and spurred on elder statesman Senator Joe O'Mahoney of Wyoming. He also claims an "in" with the White House because of his friendship with No. 1 Secretary Matt Connelly, another Irishman.

All week Mr. Truman has been pulled back and forth over the basing-point bill. First a group of small business, labor and farm leaders made a plea to Democratic Chairman Bill Boyle against the bill. Then Senators O'Mahoney and Myers and Mayor David Lawrence of Pittsburgh went to the White House and asked him to sign the bill.

Note—Lobbying against the bill on the Republican side during the Senate debate was done by William Simon, former counsel for the Capehart subcommittee on trade practices, now an $1800-a-month lobbyist. At the time Simon was working for Senator Capehart, he also lobbied with the Federal Trade Commission on behalf of alleged violators of the trade practices he was supposed to be investigating.

The Diplomatic Pouch

It's being kept very hush-hush, but last month Franco Spain asked the Export-Import Bank for a loan of $700,000 to build a fertilizer factory. . . . Last week Communist Police cracked the anti-Red underground in Poland. About 100 guerilla operators who had been derailing Russian troop trains were seized. . . . Latest trick of Soviet propaganda is to blame the U. S. A. for a plague of Colorado beetles in eastern Germany and Poland.

SO, let us tell you about the newest innovation at Center Market City. As you probably know, we have always had free parking at the market, but our big, new improved parking lot on K street is really something!

WE'VE built these new facilities in order to help you with your shopping problems. Let's say you live quite a distance from the big market, but you MUST have the fine quality produce found here. You MUST have the service you find here.

All right, distance means nothing. Get into your car, drive down to Center Market City and go to the Amoco station just east of the Market on K street. Couldn't be handier.

Tell the attendant that you want to shop at the Market—that's all you do. He'll look after your car from then on—AT NO CHARGE.

OF COURSE, if you need gas and oil, we haven't gotten quite rich enough to give those away yet, but as an extra service we provide them for you at the station. We'll also give your car a good greasing while you shop. But we have to charge you for those. The parking is absolutely free of charge, tho.

ALSO, we've ordered those nice little carts that you can take into the Market, fill up, and bring back to the car. Their service is yours with our compliments, too. Just think how much easier that is than carrying bundles to the car. Fill our little Center Market carts with produce, wheel it out to the car, turn it over to the attendant—and what could be easier?

ALL THIS, and some of the world's finest foods, too. In nearly every column, we describe the wonderful foods you'll find under this acre of roofing. Almost any food you can think of is found here. But we can't mention our SERVICE often enough, either. That is the thing that sets us apart.

Another thing about shopping at Center Market City: You don't have to wait in line to be "checked out." You can buy from specialists in their line—and every stand in the market has its specialties—and all you need do is go up to the counter and select your produce. No long lines on warm summer days. That's a lot to think about on any day, though. Ask Dad, who usually stands and stands and stands in line. Or ask yourself. If you've stood in a long line, waiting to pay your grocery bill, you know what we mean.

PARK IT at the Market—that's our new slogan down at
